ROOSEVELT'S WILL

BOY OF 15 SHOOTS YOUNG BURGLAR

Lawrence Winslow Wounds Discharged Soldier in Watertown House With Rifle

Fifteen year-old Lawrence Winslow of No. 239 Waverly avenue, Watertown, shot and routed a burglar who entered his home early today.

Roy B. Johnson, nineteen, discharged from Camp Devens yesterday, was arrested shortly after the shooting at his home on Orchard street, Watertown.

He was taken to the Waltham Hospital suffering from a wound in the right leg, and later was arraigned in the Waltham Court before Judge Abbott. He pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering and was held for the Grand Jury.

Johnson, who is known to young Winslow, was arrested as a result of information given the police by the latter. He stated that he shot a burglar in the right leg and that the man's name was Johnson and lived on Orchard street.

The police went to Johnson's home and found him in bed fully dressed. Part of his clothing was that which he wore when a private in the 301st Tank Corps at Camp Devens. The rest was a civilian garb.

Johnson had a bullet wound in his right leg which had not been treated. He refused to tell how he was wounded and was sent to the Waltham Hospital.

Young Winslow lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winslow. His father is at present away on business. Mrs. Winslow and her son were aroused early today by a noise in the lower part of their home. Lawrence seized his rifle and with his mother made his way into the dining room of the house, which is situated on the first floor.

Young Winslow turned on the light in the dining room. A burglar was on the floor in front of an open window. The boy covered him with his rifle, while his mother telephoned for the police. When the burglar realized that the police were being summoned he made a jump for the open window.

When he refused to halt when ordered to do so, young Winslow fired. He says the bullet struck the burglar in the right leg. The man, however, escaped.

When Lieutenant Arthur Howard and a squad of patrolmen arrived, the boy said that in the light of the dining room he identified the burglar as Johnson, whom he knows well. The arrest then followed.

GRACE GOULDING, Chelsea girl of 18, just awarded, Massachusetts Humane Society medal for heroism.

GIRL OF 18 GETS MEDAL FOR HEROISM

Miss Grace Goulding, an 18-year-old Chelsea girl, was today awarded by the Massachusetts Humane Society a medal for heroism displayed when she rescued a young woman from the surf at Short Beach, Winthrop, last August.

Miss Goulding is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Goulding of No. 108 Sagmore avenue. She is employed by the Federal Trust, but at the time of the rescue was a student at a business college in Boston.

The rescue made by Miss Goulding was the most sensational at Winthrop in many years. A heavy sea was running at the time and only a few bathers dared to enter the water. Miss Goulding was seated on the sands when she noticed a girl struggling in the water 200 feet from shore. Before she could swim the distance the young woman had twice sunk from sight. Miss Goulding managed to float with the exhausted girl until life savers arrived in a boat.

"I had almost forgotten the rescue," declared Miss Goulding to the American today. "It was nothing, anyone could have done it."

SIX TRANSPORTS COMING WITH 3,000

HELP IS RUSHED TO LINER CASTALIA

U. S. Shipping Board Craft Sinking Off Coast of Nova Scotia

By International News Service.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—The steamship Castalia, belonging to the United States Shipping Board, is reported sinking off Canso, N. S. Boats have been rushed to her assistance. The Castalia left Quebec for Halifax December 30.

Washington, Jan. 11.—According to officials of the United States Shipping Board, who are without official word of the reported sinking of the Castalia, the ship was taken over by the board under the ship requisition act from the Monter Oil Transportation Company of Cleveland, O., and is an oil-burning freight steamer.

She has 5,092 dead weight tonnage, is 384.5 feet long, 40.5 feet beam and draws 24.5 feet of water. She was built by the Globe Iron Works in 1883. The board is without information as to the number of crew carried.

The More Fish They Catch the Higher the Price

The more they catch the more they cost! That seems to be the story on fish. During the past week thirty-seven vessels have landed 877,500 pounds here; while prices have mounted steadily. In the same week last year twenty-six vessels landed 740,400 pounds. Steak cod is wholesaling for twenty-five and two-thirds cents a pound, and even the lowly and once despised hake brings from ten to fourteen cents a pound.

ZERO WEATHER FOR BOSTON TOMORROW

Fur muffs, woolen mufflers, fur coats and all the heavy underwear that the conscientious stores of the household boast will be requisitioned by those who face both tomorrow.

Zero temperatures are promised for Boston and the suburbs, with a good old northwest wind to keep things going, and drive the cold into the houses, and around the window panes.

Zero temperatures prevailed all over New England early today. Boston's early morning temperature of 16 above was the highest recorded for New England, at 8 o'clock. This took an undignified tumble of 12 degrees in two hours, as a gentle indication of what might be expected for the remainder of the day.

The weather man shows no indication of any relief from the icy spell that is arriving from stations all around. It may last throughout the early part of the week. The weather man could give no promises as to the real time that it would let up.

Wife Sues Cambridge Heiress for $50,000 for Alienation

Charging an entire family with conspiring to deprive her of the affections of her husband, Mrs. Alice L. Ratcliffe of No. 1483 Beacon street has brought suit for $50,000 against twenty-two-year-old Dorothy Smith, a Cambridge heiress, and the girl's mother, aunt and uncle.

Mrs. Ratcliffe, who is a partial invalid, filed her suit today in Superior Court in East Cambridge, through Attorney J. J. Carraher. She names Miss Smith as the principal, who she says deprived her of her husband's company, and finally, of his love.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Alice Smith, is charged with encouraging her daughter in her attentions to James Walter Ratcliffe, the plaintiff's husband, an automobile sales manager, some fourteen years her senior.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henderson of No. 6 Moss Hill road, Jamaica Plain, are charged with having sheltered the girl, with having gone on automobile rides with her and Ratcliffe and with having received them persistently in their home. Mr. Henderson

PRESIDENT ORDERS AWARD

Cables War Board to Review Harbor Controversy and Announce Decision Immediately

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 11.—President Wilson today cabled from Paris to the National War Labor Board to make an immediate investigation and an award in the New York harbor strike, promising the Navy Department, the War Department, the railroad administration and the shipping board will make the award effective, it was officially announced at the White House executive offices today. The text of the President's message follows:

GRAVE EMERGENCY.

"I have been informed by the Secretary of Labor as to the serious situation which has developed in the port of New York and the strike of marine workers, which seriously cripples the movement of troops and supplies. Consider this a very grave emergency and understand that it has arisen because the parties to the controversy failed to make a joint submission to the National War Labor Board.

"I earnestly request that you take an active case again and proceed to make a finding. I appreciate the honesty and sincerity of the board in announcing on Wednesday that it could not promise a final decision in the controversy without a formal submission of all parties, but I am sure that the War and Navy Departments, the shipping Board and Railroad Administration and other governmental agencies interested in the controversy will use all the power which they possess to make your

BRIDE OF DAY TO SPEND HONEYMOON IN PRISON

New Bedford, Jan. 11.—On the charge of being an idle and disorderly person, Pearl Otaro, a youthful bride of a day, started an extended honeymoon without her husband in the police court here this afternoon. Entertaining too many soldiers and sailors, both on the street and at her home on Tallman street, during her courtship with Otaro lead to her arrest.

Mrs. Otaro was arrested on a warrant issued before her marriage.

ARTILLERY IN BERLIN STREETS

Fighting Breaks Out in Hamburg; New Report of Killing of Liebknecht

Copenhagen, Jan. 11.—Reinforcement of government troops arrived in Berlin today. Artillery was used in the latest fighting in the streets of the capital. The Spartacan forces were still in possession of the Vorwaerts and other press buildings at latest reports.

Fighting has broken out between Spartacans and government troops in Hamburg. Loyal troops occupied the building of the Socialist paper Hamburg Echo and resisted the attempts of the Spartacan soldiers to drive them out.

The Spartacan counter-revolution is now general throughout Germany. A many mass strikes are spinning up in Hanover a number of strikers seized the trade union building. Following an outbreak of fighting at Augsburg, the Spartacans occupied the offices of the Zeitung and the Neueste Nachrichten. Many political pamphlets which had been printed for use in the general election on January 19 were destroyed.

The municipal building at Stuttgart was occupied by the Spartacans and the burgomaster was driven out. The plant of the Tageblatt at Duesseldorff was destroyed. The great Westphalian industrial district is now dominated by the German Bolsheviki.

BAVARIAN PROTESTS.

Kurt Eisner, Socialist Premier of Bavaria, today sent the following official dispatch to the Ebert government in Berlin, demanding a cessation of hostilities:

"The murderous civil war in Berlin with its increasing horrors must be ended unless the whole of Germany is to perish. Berlin's example has a demoralizing effect. The Bavarian

Canada With Troops Now Racing Over Sea to Boston

Cable advices from Liverpool state the British transport Canada is bound from Brest, France, to Boston with several hundred United States soldiers aboard. No intimation is given as to the division represented by the men on board. The Canada should reach Boston January 22.

The troops aboard will go through the same procedure as did the men on the Canopic. They will undergo an examination by army surgeons at quarantine and will proceed up the harbor to the docks in Charlestown, where they will be placed in trains for Camp Devens.

TO DISCHARGE MILLION OF HOME TROOPS

Washington, Jan. 11.—The total number of officers and men designated for discharge from the service in the United States is 1,253,000 and from overseas 80,000, General Peyton C. March, chief-of-staff, announced today at his weekly conference with newspaper men of the press.

Beginning today, General March said, in announcing the number of men from overseas who have been designated for discharge, he would include only those who have actually arrived in the United States. Sick and wounded and casuals will not be included.

Discharges of men in service here and abroad totalled, 632,339 on January 31 and of officers 47,028, General March added. The number of officers and men who have arrived in the United States fro overseas is now 136,694.

The progress of America's demobilization was compared by General March with that of Great Britain. Up to January 7, General March stated the United Kingdom had discharged only 252,628 men and 3,951 officers. He explained, however, that a different system was used, Great Britain demobilizing her armies according to trades and their needs while the United States is still following out the unit system of demobilization.

ESTATE IN TRUST FUND

Income of All Except $60,000 Is Left to Mrs. Roosevelt

Mineola, N. Y., Jan. 11.—Practically all of the estate left by the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is to be created into a trust fund, the bulk of the income going to the widow, it was revealed by the will filed here today. Mrs. Roosevelt is authorized to dispose of the principal of the trust fund among the children, if she desires.

The executors of the will are directed to divide a trust fund of $60,000, which had been left to Colonel Roosevelt by his father, into shares for distribution among his children and grandchildren. The petition accompanying the filing of the will stated that the real estate was valued at "over $20,000," and that the personal estate at "over $20,000."

TEXT OF THE WILL.

The will reads as follows:

"I, Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, County of Nassau, State of New York, hereby make, do publish, and declare this to be my last will and testament, hereby revoking all former wills by me made.

"First—As I have given to my daughter, Alice, all the silver given as wedding presents on my marriage with her mother, I give no other silver, plate and articles of ware to any other children or to dispose of as their

Hearst Diligently Worked to Aid U. S. Government, Says Tumulty

Washington, Jan. 11.

THE attention of Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the President, was called to Major Keehn's testimony on Thursday. He said:

"It is true that Major Keehn came to see me last Summer and said that he came at the direction of Mr. Hearst, whom he represents in Chicago. He stated that he had been given information that might lead to the securing of the confidential papers of Count von Bernstorff and Captain Boy-Ed.

"He further stated that it was Mr. Hearst's desire that the search be conducted with government sanction and under government supervision. This was arranged for him, and I know that the work was diligently carried on."

"Third. All the real estate and the remainder of my estate, both real and personal, wheresoever and whatsoever, including any legacies which may lapse and all other property which I have power to appoint or dispose of by will, I devise and bequeath to my executors who shall qualify, the survivors of them and their successors, in trust

INCOME TO MRS. ROOSEVELT

"First—To collect and receive the rents, profits, interest and income and apply them to the use of my wife, Edith Kermit Roosevelt, during her life.

"Second. I authorize and empower my wife by last will and testament, published and executed after my decease, to dispose of the principal of this trust to and among such one or more of my children and persons, and either absolutely or upon any trust, or limitation thereof as she shall decline.

"Third—In default of any such testamentary disposition by my wife after my decease I devise and bequeath all said real estate and the residue of my estate, both real and personal, wheresoever and whatsoever, including any legacies which may lapse and all other property which I have power to appoint or dispose of by will, to my children, who survive my wife and to the issue surviving her of any deceased child of mine according to their stocks.

NO INVENTORY TO BE FILED.

"Fourth—I direct my executors to hold each share of my estate which any infant legatee or devisee may be or become entitled to, absolutely under this will until such infant attains the age of twenty-one years and that in the meantime they collect and receive the income of such shares as held respectively and apply them to the use of the infant legatee.

"Fifth. I direct that my executors shall not be required to file any inventory of my estate or give security for the same or any part thereof. I authorize and empower my executors and trustees, the survivor of them and their successors to sell and partition my real and personal estate all at one time, or in different parcels from time to time and to consent to the sale and partition of any real estate in which I may be interested. Such sales may be either public or private and they are authorized to execute all proper instruments for carrying such sales and partitions into effect. I also authorize them to personally appraise my real and personal property and divide and allot the same to the various trusts and among the several legatees and devisees in accordance with such appraisement which shall be final and conclusive beyond any dispute or appeal.

"I also authorize them to retain and hold at the risk of the share to which the same may be allotted as an investment for any trust created or created for any infant legatee any investment, real or personal which they have and I may leave at the time of my decease and reinvest the whole or any part of the proceeds of the sale of real property sold and all moneys and personal property held or received by them as trustees, or for any infant legatee in and upon real estate, all bonds secured by mortgage on railroad or other real estate, or on bonds, stocks, or obligations of corporations, or in such other securities, evidences of debt, or property, real or personal, whether of or situated in the United States or any foreign country as in their own personal judgment may seem best and from time to time to sell any real or personal property held or purchased by them and to change the investments of them and to whatever they please, and as and whenever they please and they shall not be responsible for any losses arising therefrom.

THREE EXECUTORS NAMED.

"Sixth. I further authorize my executors and trustees out of the income of each share held in trust during the minority of aliegatee or devisee respectively to pay all taxes, assessments and charges upon the same or insurance thereon, also from time to time as their discretion may guide or lease of the real estate forming any part thereof upon such terms and conditions not beyond the ensuing twenty-one years, as to them may be desirable, also to build, repair, alter or improve any such real estate expending for the purpose any of the other principal of such share as in their own personal judgment may seem wise."

Colonel Roosevelt appointed Edith Kermit Roosevelt, his wife and his son, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and George Emlen Roosevelt, executrix and executors of the will. If any of them should die or fail to qualify, the others can name their successor.

SHOULD USE ALL ITS POWER.

"The National War Labor Board has been established with the approval of the President and has assumed publicly and officially the responsibility of war work and the settlement of industrial disputes. It has not assumed the responsibility of investigation of any labor controversy that is not submitted to it by the consent of all the parties to the controversy, and it is my earnest hope that no controversy will be permitted to arise affecting the war, which cannot be settled by the instrumentalities already established. The Board should use all means within its power to prevent strikes and to prevent industrial demoralization.

WOODROW WILSON."

Shortly after the telegram from the White House was received, it was announced that the War Labor Board would meet in executive session this afternoon to consider the situation.

Notified the War Labor Board that unless the strikers returned to work by Monday the Government would take over the plants and operate them with soldier labor.

May Call Out 42,000 Longshoremen to Aid Strike of N. Y. Boatmen

New York, Jan. 11.—With the opening vote in the local harbor controversy apparently further from settlement than ever, a motion was made at a meeting of marine workers in Hoboken to call out 42,000 longshoremen in sympathy with the striking boatmen.

Leaders of the 16,000 striking marine workers also are planning to extend the walkout to 42,000 longshoremen unless the latter vote at a meeting scheduled for tomorrow to refuse to handle cargo.

Officers of the International Longshoremen's Association, upon learning of the proposed action, declared that the strike would have failed to receive their support.

Police guards are being furnished to some of the Public Service Commission trains that have been attacked by strikers in the Metropolitan district, because of failure to obtain them.

"Unless the strike is settled by Monday," Commissioner Whitney said today, "some measures will have to be taken by the government to bring it to an end, or the situation will become alarming."

Strike leaders also intimated that workers of the Hudson and Manhattan tube systems might strike at any time, making the same demands as the marine workers. The tubes are the only arteries of transit left open except the Lackawanna ferries. The strikers, failing to call off the Lackawanna crews, now plan to stop the boats through calling a strike of the employees operating coal wagons which serve the ferries.

NEEDLES AND THREAD IN $1,500 ROBBERY

Thieves carried away every bit of material and equipment from the tailor shop of Mrs. G. Zimm at No. 551 Boylston street, during the night, not overlooking even needles, thread and cloth samples. Mrs. Zimm's loss was $1,500. The thieves entered by breaking a transom above an outside door, and working through an inner transom. Men's dressed and satin, silks and laces not made up formed the greater part of their booty. The girls employed at the shop arrived to find that the cutters had left them a clean sweep.

By International News Service.

Paris, Mar. 11.—The Supreme Interallied Food Council was summoned to meet today for the first time to outline plans for the entertainment of Europe. The first problem will be the feeding of the Balkan States, no action being taken regarding Germany and Austria-Hungary until later. The summons for the meeting was issued by Herbert Hoover.

SUES CAMBRIDGE HEIRESS FOR ALIENATION

PROSPECTIVE HEIRESS.

The Smiths live at No. 24 Dana street, Cambridge. Miss Smith will be a rich woman if she survives her father, a prosperous Bell dealer.

The Smith girl is remembered as a most attractive young woman in Cambridge by those who knew her before she married and became a society woman. The Ratcliffes were married in 1915, and their marital troubles began in the Summer of 1917, according to the papers filed by Mrs. Ratcliffe. They have one child.

At summer party of the Ratcliffes, Hendersons and Noltes to Nahant in that year is said to have come to a premature end because of an objection of the wife to the attentions her husband was paying Miss Smith. Before the three families came home Mrs. Ratcliffe became seriously ill, and was taken to a hospital for an operation. Counsel for the papers in the alienations suit, that she is now not yet in good health, and has been benefited by the solace of her husband's support.

SAYS OTHER SHARE BLAME.

The plaintiff regards the mother, uncle and aunt of the Smith girl as equally culpable with her daughter for what she terms the alienation of her husband's love.

It is rumored that when the case comes to trial there will be testimony of a scandalous character regarding wild joyrides in which Ratcliffe was last accompanied by his wife and other happenings at Nahant.

Mrs. Ratcliffe is expected to tell of occasions when she visited the home of the Hendersons in search of her husband, on which occasions they refused to call him to the door.

government, supported by the people's confidence, including all of the socialist factions, risen in indignation against Berlin with the dark elements of fratricidal murder."

In addition to cutting off the shipment and distribution of bread the Spartacists in Berlin are trying to tie up the water and electricity supplies. The bakers are unable to do any baking owing to the scarcity of water. At a mass meeting of 20,000 Spartacans a resolution was adopted prolonging a strike of all labor organizations "to end the bloodshed."

EBERT TO CRUSH REBELS.

Chancellor Ebert, acting upon the advice of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, has decided "to wipe out the Spartacans by brute force," said an Amsterdam dispatch today.

The Chancellor was quoted as saying that he was confident of a victory that would not end in prolonging and Germany from the "reds" but the rest of civilized Europe as well.

Karl Liebknecht, chief leader of the Spartacans, is reported to have been killed in street fighting in Berlin on Thursday night, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Berlin. The report was received yesterday.

The Spartacans have lost heavily. Hundreds are reported to have been killed in the fighting around Brandenburg gate. Leaders of the Spartacan group have been distributing great sums of money to start strikes. There was a battle raging in Berlin's station. Many Spartacans deserted and surrendered to the government forces. The Spartacans attacked the government troops declaring the German situation would but were driven off. Later the defenders blew up the cannon.

Y. M. C. A. OPENS HUT.

During the street fighting in Berlin, Conrad Hoffman, a former Y. M. C. A. secretary, opened a Y. M. C. A. hut in one of the principal streets and sold supplies to American, British and French prisoners of war, who had made their way into the capital from the detention camps from which they had escaped. There was a sign over the door reading, "American Y. M. C. A."

Hoffman is a graduate of the University of Kansas and represented the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Funston. He entered the army over into the war. He remained here and was permitted to go to Berlin to look after the interned prisoners, obtaining money from the Y. M. C. A. through Switzerland and other neutral countries.

Germany for League When Crime Is Washed Out, Says Bourgeois

By International News Service.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Germany can only become a member of the League of Nations after washing out her crimes, by paying indemnities, by repairing her wrongs and by making reparations both material and moral, said Leon Bourgeois, famous French authority on the subject of international league, in an interview printed in the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail today.

"I observe that the American plan is without an economic side. The conference should consider an international financial control. It must come to an agreement on questions concerning all the allies such as organization of workers, industrial legislation as to wages and above all the health of the working classes and an eight-hour day.

"The first task of the league should embrace the allied nations that fought the war. They should be its nucleus. Agreement and pledged to maintain peace by compulsory arbitration, until the execution of the agreements and the necessary measures against any State violating the international agreements and armaments sufficiently strong to enforce obligations on the part of the allies are going to establish at the preliminary sittings.

"After the peace conference the position of the neutrals should be considered and finally Germany should be asked to present credentials as a candidate for admission.

"But the world conference following the peace conference must examine and satisfy itself with the guarantees that the Germans offer."

'Intervention,' Lvoff Says, if Russia Is to Be Saved

By DELTUS M. EDWARDS.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

(Copyright, 1919, by International News Service).

Paris, Jan. 11.—Prince George Lvoff, head of Russia's first provisional government and president of the Russian ambassadors' conference now sitting in Paris, today summed up Russia's needs as follows:

First. Recognition by the allies of the Omsk, or central, Russian government.

Second. Granting of Russia's representatives full powers at the peace conference.

Third. Immediate and real military intervention in Russia.

"The Omsk government crystallizes all the governments of Russia struggling against Bolshevism," said the prince. "It is seeking to suppress Bolshevik tyranny and struggling for the expression of the real feelings of the people of Russia.

"The conference, made up of ambassadors of the old government from Paris, London, Madrid, Rome and Washington, has already presented a memorandum to the allies asking permission to sit at the peace conference. No reply has yet been received.

"The allies must take cognizance of the situation and assist Russia now, for German influence is growing stronger with the Bolsheviks every day. German Bolshevism in Russia must be ousted. The longer this is delayed the more difficult becomes the situation.

"The first great need of Russia is recognition of the national Omsk government. This represents all the really influential people of Russia today—people who long for a peaceful development.

"The Omsk government now has 200,000 soldiers—all excellent. I am sure of the national army winning success, but intervention, which must come immediately, would give our army time for full expansion and time for all the forces of Russia to co-operate with it. The longer it is put off, the harder will be the task.

"When I was in Russia, three months ago the Bolsheviks had an army of about 200,000 men. Of these 250,000 were Hungarians.

"Intervention now and restore order to give Russia time to organize for peace. The allies should not attempt half measures. They should uphold and support the national government and make the sovereign power of the people strong at the same time. This would liberate the country from the minority who hold supremacy only by physical power.

"The moral power of the Bolsheviks is dwindling. They are working with German troops of the same stamp. The situation becomes more and more as if the allies were dealing with Germany."

WOULD GIVE SURGICAL FUND TO HOSPITALS

In the Action of 1917 the New England Surgical Dressings Committee was established by the National Civic Federation for the purpose of making surgical dressings for wounded soldiers. A large amount of money was raised, and when the armistice was signed there remained in the hands of Miss Edith Dexter, treasurer, an unexpended balance of $23,462.39. Members of the committee have asked the Supreme Court to allow them to turn over to the Massachusetts General Hospital, the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and the National Civic Federation $10,000 each.

GRANTS DIVORCE TO GIRL WED AT 13

Portland, Me., Jan. 11.—Ruth Palmer of South Portland, married to Harris M. Palmer when she was but thirteen and he forty-five, was granted a divorce by Judge Sanborn in the Superior Court.

Palmer was ordered to pay $5 a week alimony.

WALKER D. HINES NEW HEAD OF RAILROADS

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—William G. McAdoo announced here today the appointment of Walker D. Hines as his successor as director-general of railways. Mr. Hines has assumed the office.

Mr. Hines has been assistant director-general almost since the organization of the railway administration.

The appointment of Mr. Hines was made by President Wilson by cablegram from Paris. The cable was transmitted from the White House in Washington to Mr. McAdoo as he was speeding on the train through Arizona to California for a vacation.

In announcing the appointment Mr. McAdoo stated that Mr. Hines "is in full sympathy with the policies which have guided the railroad administration and with the views of the President on the railroad question."

BIG SALARY PROVIDED.

Although the official papers announcing the appointment of Hines made no mention of salary, it is understood that his present salary of $15,000 a year will be increased just as to be commensurate with his added responsibilities. Mr. McAdoo served gratis, no government official being allowed to receive two salaries.

McAdoo's announcement of the appointment of his successor follows:

"The President has authorized me to announce the appointment of Walker D. Hines as director general of railroads. He will enter upon the duties of his office immediately.

"Mr. Hines has been my assistant in Washington since the beginning of government control of the railroads and has a thorough knowledge of the organization and administration of the railroads under Federal control, as well as the fundamental problems involved in the railroad situation.

"His ability and experience admirably fit him for the great trust and responsibility with which the President has honored him.

"Aside from his obvious qualities, Mr. Hines is in full sympathy with the policies which have guided the railroad administration and with the views of the President on the railroad question."

"I am sure that Mr. Hines will have the hearty support of the fine army of railroad officers and workers and I can ask nothing better for him than that they shall give him and the country the same loyal and effective service which was rendered during my term of office."

Walker Downer Hines has been Assistant Director-General of Railroads, in charge of legal matters. He was formerly a Kentucky lawyer. He was assistant chief attorney for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, then general counsel for the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. He has had great law practice in New York since 1903.

Roosevelt Believed in League of Nations, Says Straus

New York, Jan. 11.—Theodore Roosevelt believed in the advisability of forming a league of nations, it was declared before a large gathering at Carnegie Hall by Oscar Straus, former ambassador to Turkey.

Mr. Straus said Colonel Roosevelt revealed his views to him two days prior to Christmas Day respecting the forging of nations idea, while the colonel was still a patient in Roosevelt Hospital.

The meeting was electrified at announcement that Colonel Roosevelt had been supposed to be opposed to the idea.

Strong endorsement of the league of nations plan was voted by the assemblage and a message was rushed to President Wilson apprising him of the fact.

General Edwards Indorses American's Plan to Help Returning Soldiers and Sailors

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, commanding the Department of the Northeast, heartily indorses the plan of the Boston American to help returning soldiers and sailors by opening its "Situations Wanted" columns to them free of charge.

"It is the most common-sense plan I've heard of yet," he said. "You can't help the boys of the army and navy too much. They've done splendid work. If the people don't help these boys, I'm ashamed of my fellow men."

CALL ON EMPLOYERS TO MAKE JOBS FOR RETURNING MEN

By HAZEL CANNING.

"It's up to the community!"

"It's the business of every employer in the city, from the employer who hires three men to the employer who hires 3,000."

"If there aren't jobs—then, for the emergency, in the name of high patriotism, create jobs."

"The need is growing greater every day." These are some of the pronouncements made by C. W. Waldron, manager in charge of the Co-operating Agencies, working with the Federal Employment Bureau at Liberty Hut, on the Common, to the Boston American, today.

"It will help a great deal, the American's giving free employment advertisements to every service man looking for work," said Mr. Waldron. "It ought to bring the employe and the soldier together with small time wasted. This message, in the American, will also aid. This is the message—You employers, you men and women of the community, just waken to the fact that it is your business, your town's and city's business, to find the soldier work. To find him work, even at the cost of creating work, temporarily."

MANY WITHOUT FUNDS.

Manager Waldron furnished figures to back up the idea. Nine days the bureau has been open on the Common. In these nine days 697 service men have applied for work. Of these, 356 have been referred to employers for the purpose of investigating positions offered. And of these 356 applicants, 26 have been placed. Fifty-nine men, in nine days, out of 697 who have applied.

"It looks as if the community needed to tackle its job," was Manager Waldron's comment. "It certainly looks as if it were somebody's business."

Now as to these boys and the situation. From 9 in the morning till 1 in the afternoon they come and go, sitting in two rows of chairs, waiting, waiting, waiting. Many of these soldiers are absolutely without funds. There are even those who lack the sixteen cents to travel over to Charlestown to apply for the job of mess cutter, a vacancy to be explored into the employment bureau.

The bureau is full of this sort: "Anybody want to work for the Elevated?" queries one of the attendants at the hut on the Common. "Starting three forty-six cents an hour." Two come forward.

"Mess cutter, can anybody cut meat?" Nobody present at the time cuts meat. That position is filled later. "Wanted, men for clerical work. Where's the man who knows how to keep books?"

VOCATIONAL TRAINING NEEDED.

The man fails to show up. "Which emphasizes," as Manager Waldron points out, "the need in our city for vocational training. We have hundreds of soldiers looking for unskilled labor. We have quite a few positions for skilled workers, which we are not able to fill."

This is some advice given by the co-operating agencies to the American, for the soldier out of work. "Go back to your own community, whenever possible. Let your old employer know you need a job. It is up to him, and, in most cases, we have found him willing to help. And, also, very important, go back to the kind of work you did before you went to war."

Which is advice all very well, as the American, and the "co-operating agencies" agree. But, a little more boost, many times, before he can carry the advice out. Many a deserving music teacher, for example.

Before the war, as he explained to Waldron, he had a large number of pupils, from whom he made an excellent living. He lost these when he became a soldier. He has been discharged with one month's pay. He is "strapped," as he puts it, within one penny. "Give me work," he urged; "I don't care what. Even I would do day's labor. But, I've got to have something. A man doesn't get together fifty music pupils in time to pay this month's rent and buy the morning's breakfast. Yet the rent still comes due the first of the month and breakfast has a way of confronting a man in the morning. Whatever the name of my needs, are you going to do for me?"

WIDOW GETS MOST OF STOKES' 2 MILLION ESTATE

SOLDIERS AVAIL THEMSELVES OF FREE ADS

Offer of American to Aid Service Men Secure Jobs Brings Quick Response

Supplementing the work which the American has started, regarding the securing of employment for returning soldiers, placards have been placed at many centres informing the men of the opportunity placed gratuitously before them.

The army and navy canteen, the Employment Service Bureau, the Y. M. C. A. hut and the Salvation Army war hut on the Common have placed in conspicuous places in each building, solicitations for the employment of men, informing them of the American's offer of free use of its advertising columns for seeking situations.

The Jewish Service Club, Scollay Square Service Club, the Naval Service Club on Boylston street and Boston Y. M. C. U. on Boylston street have also been placarded. In addition to these, the American proposes to have substations, located in outlying districts, where applications, advertisements may be registered by soldiers and sailors without causing them the inconvenience of placing them in the city offices of the Boston American.

READY TO CO-OPERATE.

Among the men and women who have praised the American's action, and one who strikes right to the heart of the situation, is John C. Heyer, vice-president of the Federal Trust Company and secretary of the 101st Infantry Associates. Mr. Heyer says:

"The boys returning will be found to have a hard time in a great many cases in securing employment, because of many concerns having abolished the positions held by men, and the movement started by the American to help relieve this and other conditions which are bound to exist is most commendable. I can assure the American of our hearty co-operation for solving the big problem."

Major Michael J. Moore, assistant adjutant, Department of the Northeast, said:

"This move on the part of the Boston American has my hearty support. To help returning soldiers and sailors and make them feel we are going to restore them to a position where they feel we value what they have done is right and dignifying as every one of us. Now that the war is practically over we ought to show a deep interest in the returning heroes and give them evidence that we appreciate their deeds."

Miss Esta Barr, managing director 101st Infantry Auxiliary, said:

"Anything that will help the returning soldier and sailor to secure work is of the highest patriotic service. Securing employment for them is one of our greatest problems."

OPPORTUNITY UP TO EMPLOYER.

Now it is the opportunity up to you, Mr. Employer of Boston and New England. With your co-operation, many of these men, skilled in all departments of business, thoroughly disciplined, with the best training in the world, absolutely physically fit, and anxious to obtain employment, will secure their place back in civilian life. The Classified Want Ad Pages of the American have become their own organ, the mouthpiece through which they ask you for a new place in business life.

SOLDIERS COMPLAIN OF WORK ON SHIPBOARD

New York, Jan. 11.—Complaint was made by many of the 1,000 American soldiers who arrived here on the Lina that they had been compelled to slush down and scrub the ship's decks on the way from France. Such work was the duty of the vessel's crew, they maintained.

SINN FEINERS RIOT FOR RIGHTS AS PRISONERS

London, Jan. 11.—Several Sinn Fein prisoners at Mount Joy, claiming the right to be treated as political prisoners, smashed the prison windows and fixtures and tore their bed clothes, clamoring for their "rights." DECLARES SONS ARE DEPLETING EATON ESTATE

The three sons of the late Charles S. Eaton, proprietor of Thomson's Spa, have taken $15,000 from the estate since litigation was begun, in spite of the injunction given Mrs. Ella F. Eaton, the restaurateur's widow, by the decrees of Judge Brahe, according to statements made in the Suffolk court today by Attorney Charles F. Choate, Jr., who claimed the Eaton estate was being depleted without the authority of the special administrator.

The son and Attorney Choate, took the money and paid what they claim were debts contracted by their father, and apparently without regard for the rights of the widow.

Judge De Courcy declined to modify an injunction previously issued by Judge Brahe to preserve the estate so as to enable Sumner C. Bennett, special administrator, to pay an income tax of $45,000 now due the United States Government, and which, if not paid today is subject to an interest charge of 6 per cent.

Attorney Choate questioned the validity of the tax as the Eaton estate was not in such shape as to determine the amount upon which an income tax could be levied, Mr. Choate said that even if the court gave Mr. Bennett authority to pay the tax, he doubted if Mr. Bennett would assume the responsibility of taking the money out of the estate at the present time.

Judge De Courcy suggested that the proper course was to go before the Probate Court of Essex County and get a decree allowing Mr. Bennett to pay the tax. If the Probate Court acted favorably in the matter, he (Judge De Courcy) would in all probability modify Judge Braley's decree to that effect.

DEFENDANT IN THREE AUTO ACCIDENT SUITS

Philip T. Leveque of Manchester, N. H., is defendant in three suits in Cambridge court, totalling $16,000 in damages asked. James E. Lennon of Arlington sues for $10,000, Katherine Cullinane of Kensington, as administratrix of the estate of Charles N. O'Donnell of Arlington, asks $20,000, and Wilfred R. Kennedy of Arlington sues for $10,000. On September 8, 1918, an automobile operated by Kennedy was struck by a car owned by Leveque in Lexington. O'Donnell received injuries from which he died on September 8. The other defendants were severely injured and Kennedy's car was wrecked.

ARRESTED AND FREED IN MAINE MYSTERY

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Rockland, Me., Jan. 11.—For a few minutes today it looked as though the search for the slayer of Mrs. Carolyn Wolt Brown were ended. Amid considerable excitement, a man was arrested and as he was about to take the 7:45 p. m. train for Portland. After being questioned, however, he was released, and the activities of the officials were once more centred in the following up of another suspect.

STILL ANOTHER SUSPECT.

Since the brutal clubbing to death of the attractive Rockland widow on the night of December 30, the actions of the man held this morning have been peculiar, and he has been closely watched. Although he has appeared in the streets in the daytime, in the uniform of a soldier, it is known that he has a long dark overcoat, and dark suit of clothes like those worn by a man described by witnesses as having lurked in the neighborhood of the crime on the eventful night. He is also tall enough to fit into the description of the man in question. He is a foreigner.

Although the authorities are reticent, it is known that another suspect is being closely watched, who has not heretofore entered into the case. He is not the young man of peculiar habits previously described as a centre of suspicion. On the contrary, he is asserted to be a man of middle age, and of entirely normal habits so far as known.

Another line of new evidence, regarded as important, was given to Deputy Sheriff Henry L. Wyllie by a woman.

As a result, it is now hinted that the attack on Mrs. Brown took place in another part of the city and that the unconscious form was brought to Limerock street, where she was clubbed to death.

Blood was found to the east of the field in which the body was found, and hitherto believed to be the scene of the murder, are now thought to be from the body of the victim as it was carried, probably from a considerable, about 100 feet into the open lot.

TIME OF ATTACK UNCERTAIN.

The time of the murder is also the subject of an entirely new theory. It had been estimated that the murder took place between 10:30 and 11 p. m.

New evidence tends to show that it occurred much later. About 10:30 a young woman is known to have passed the spot where the supposed clubbing took place, and another young woman passed about 11 p. m. Neither saw or heard anything out of the ordinary or noticed a woman's turban lying near the sidewalk in the spot in which Mrs. Brown's hat was afterward found.

Vigilants Threaten to 'Supplant Police in Search for Slayer

By PAUL HARRIS DRAKE.

Rockland, Me., Jan. 11.—As a stimulus toward apprehending the murderer of Mrs. Carolyn Wolt Brown, slain within a few feet of her home, here, on the night of December 30, an additional reward of $2,500 was today offered.

The Rockland City Club has added $1,000 to the reward fund and has appointed a committee to raise an additional $2,500 among citizens which, together with the $2,000 offered by the city and State, total $5,000.

Coincident with the efforts of local police to gather together the loose threads of evidence tending to show the participation of a much-discussed gang in the heinous affair were the declaration of prominent merchants that evening business had suffered such a set-back owing to the inability of the authorities to make an arrest that a general boycott to keep stores open in the evening.

The temper of the community demanded the appointment of a vigilance committee to be on the alert to guard against a repetition of the crime. Talk of an approaching meeting of indignant citizens whose function would be the task of calling a session of parliament of citizens at which summary action should be taken was heard from every quarter today.

The "Silent Sisters," the local organization of which the dead woman was a charter member, plan to hold their next regular meeting on Monday at the home of Mrs George W. Snowden, Jr., at No. 42 Masonic street.

This organization is equivalent to a fortnightly club, and Monday's meeting will be the first which has taken place since the meeting held at the home of Mrs. Brown preceding the day on which she was murdered.

It is expected that resolutions on the death of their departed member will be framed and an appeal made to the men and women of Rockland to avenge the brutal murder of Mrs. Brown.

Beginning Tuesday the January term of the Knox County Courts convenes in Rockland. The Grand Jury will be in session during the first week, and it is probable that County Attorney Henry L. Withee will go before that body with whatever evidence he has been able to gather and seek to have a plausible suspect indicted for the murder.

"Common Drunks" Disappear in "Dry" Newport

Newport, R. I., Jan. 11.—Theophilus Topham, lieutenant and police officer in filing his annual report says there has "not been a single 'common drunk' arraigned since last March," and adds:

"Last March by order of the Secretary of the Navy, the sale of all intoxicants in Newport was forbidden, as well as their importation or even carrying in addition within the five-mile zone their established. As a result of this order, Newport has been practically dry.

"Some of the confirmed drunkards state that they are well satisfied to have liquor kept away, as they realize that they are far better off, and can now enjoy the rare sensation of having a spare dollar in their pockets."

EASTMAN AND EDITORS ON MASSES SET FREE

New York, Jan. 11.—The Federal indictments charging violation of the espionage act against Max Eastman and his associates on the Masses were quashed by Federal Judge John C. Knox, on motion of Assistant Federal Attorney Earl B. Barnes, and there will be no further government prosecution.

The other persons thus rendered immune from prosecution on the indictments are Floyd Dell, C. Merrill Rogers, Jr., John Reed, a magazine writer, and Arthur Young, cartoonist. Henry J. Glintenkamp, another Masses defendant, who died, supposedly in Mexico, is not relieved from prosecution by the order.

ULTIMATUM BY 35,000 N. Y. GARMENT WORKERS

New York, Jan. 11.—Representatives of 35,000 New York garment workers have sent an ultimatum to the Waist and Dress Manufacturers' Association granting that body a week in which to agree to arbitration of difference a strike be called, it is announced.

FALL FROM PORCH FATAL TO WOMAN

Mrs. Marietta L. Harrison, No. 57 Quincy street, Medford Hillside, who was injured on Wednesday by a fall from a second story porch, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital yesterday. She will be buried from Waterman's Undertaking Parlors, No. 2,326 Washington street, Roxbury, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Fire Department and Police Called to Catch Pigeon

An exhausted carrier pigeon landed on the roof of Mrs. Alfred J. Finney's home at No. 19 Villa avenue, Winthrop. Mrs. Finney saw the bird and called the police station on the telephone. Patrolman A. French arrived a few minutes later and when he found he couldn't reach the bird he sent for the fire department.

Chief Alfred Tewksbury and a squad of his trained comrades dashed up a few minutes later in charge of the department's best fire trucks. The bird saw the collection of uniforms and the determined expressions on the men's faces and flew away.

The next bird that gets lost in Winthrop may stay where it lands for all the firemen care.

WILSON MEETS 2 PREMIERS SUNDAY

Preliminary Conference Arranged With Lloyd George and Clemenceau

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Plans were completed today for a preliminary conference on Sunday when President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau and Premier Lloyd George are expected to attend.

A program for the first complete conversation will then be presented and approved. If it is impossible for President Wilson to attend this meeting his place will likely be taken by Secretary of State Lansing. Marshal Foch will be present at the first meeting of the envoys. It was necessary for him to go to Treves to meet the Belgian parliamentaires for discussion of the interpretation of the armistice.

The United States delegates favor the issuance of an official communique following each session in which the work can be arranged. Something similar to this is reported to be contemplated by the British delegation, but it was definitely determined. Much attention has been attracted to the fact that a cablegram from London giving a detailed report of the league of nations in many particulars is understood to follow the chief features of the plan originally drawn, differing on certain details. Privately many statesmen here indicate that the league of nations might form an excellent basis on which to build a world peace.

The conference will reject the suggestion of imperialism based on force, it was declared.

MRS. SKEELS TO LIVE TO FACE ACCUSERS

Lawrence, Jan. 11.—Mrs. Bessie Hay Skeels, reduced in strength and emaciated from her experiences, is determined to live and face trial in Lawrence court for the murder of Miss Florence Day, one time a teacher in Dover Academy.

Mrs. Skeels was indicted early last Fall. Since then a New Jersey court has returned an indictment for the murder of her brother, whose death occurred the previous July. Mrs. Skeels, against her own wishes, was forced against her will by the attending physicians believed that it would be fatal to her if she refused to take nourishment to acquaint her with this fact.

Two weeks Mrs. Skeels' condition has been considered critical, and it has been announced from time to time that she would not live. Today, however, was until the time set for trial, February 24.

Petition to the Secretary of War to Send Soldiers Home With Six Months' Pay

Sign this petition, get your friends to sign it, and forward it to the Boston Advertiser, 82 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.

To the Honorable Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War:

The undersigned respectfully urge you to return to their homes as soon as possible the soldiers who have accomplished so brilliantly every object America had in the war.

We urge, also, that you obtain the necessary authority to pay these men their military wages for six months, or for some sufficient period after their discharge from the army until they can obtain useful and remunerative employment.

We urge this as an act of simple justice by a great nation to its heroes.

DEATH TOLL OF EPIDEMIC IS DECLINING

23 Succumb to Disease in Past 24 Hours Against 37 for Previous Day

Deaths from influenza and pneumonia took a decided drop today while the number of new cases increased.

There were 22 deaths from both diseases reported to the Health Commissioner during the past 24 hours. Friday there were 37 deaths. New cases reported today numbered 232, against 219 Friday.

Commissioner Woodward stated that the drop in deaths was most significant of a general improvement all along the line.

He said:

"The increase in the number of cases of lobar pneumonia reported is of no immediate significance, since the reporting of lobar pneumonia must be recognized as in no way complete, and the reporting system is as yet hardly sufficiently stable to afford an index from day to day of the prevalence of the disease.

"The incompleteness of the reporting of lobar pneumonia is shown by the fact that the number of deaths reported as due to this disease during the week ended January 4 was 1,000, while the number of cases reported during the same week was 1,100, and during the preceding week the number of deaths reported was 29 and the number of cases 72. Accordingly, the ordinary percentage of fatalities among cases of lobar pneumonia, as stated by Osler, is from 20 to 37. The foregoing figures indicate a percentage of fatalities amounting to from 40 to 50.

"The only fair inference to be drawn from this is that many fatal cases of lobar pneumonia are not reported, and such unreported fatal number of cases of this disease as have been reported from day to day during the past week must be attributed rather to irregularities in the reporting system than to variations in the day-to-day prevalence of the disease."

BOY DISAPPEARS FROM HIS HOME

The American has been asked to aid in locating 14-year-old Joseph Perry, who left the home of his parents at No. 19 Dillingham street, Saugus Hill, on December 19, and has not been heard from since. His description is: 4 ft. 10 in. and 97 lbs. fair, dark grey knee pants, dark blue coat, dark red sweater, and a gray cap. There is a white spot on his head above the right ear. It is believed that he left because he did not want him to continue school instead of going to work in a bowling alley, as he desired. Any information will be greatly appreciated by his worried mother.

Congestion and inflammation, resulting in aches, pains, stiffness, give way before its soothing, warmth-producing, economical, certain, convenient, clean. You won't find a druggist who hasn't Sloan's Liniment. 30c, 60c, $1.20.

Sloan's Liniment Kills Pain

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause--Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking drastic, nerve-racking pills or a pour digestion, they are attacking the very cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and biliousness.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, furred tongue, appetite poor, lazy, don't care feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested foods, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do their work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can go out and play like it. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

PEACE SOLUTION DIFFICULT, SAYS DR. DILLON

Dr. E. J. Dillon, one of the world's greatest journalists, will report the peace proceedings, upon which the eyes of the world are now centred, for New England readers exclusively through the columns of the Boston American. Dr. Dillon will write upon the preliminaries leading up to the main Peace Conference and upon the Versailles sessions.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Higher notes are being introduced into the newspaper press and into the frivolities of conversation as the day draws near on which the destinies of the world will receive an impulse that for good or evil will be felt through many future generations.

DR. E. J. DILLON

Never before were men of limited experience and mere human nature entrusted with such far-ranging decision. The difficulties confronting them are redoubtable.

Improvisation may spell disaster, yet the urgency is irresistible, and the time at their disposal will be measured by weeks. The ground on which a grandiose international fabric has to be raised is still encumbered with the ruins of mighty empires which must be cleared away before the political architects can begin constructive work. Russia, Germany, Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, now floundering in the ooze of chaotic formidable obstacles, but not the route that will be taken.

Big on issues that affect the peoples of the world pave fixed their gaze and are standing silent, watchful and stern but ready by their approval and applause to provide motives for inspiration and rewards for moral courage. They, at least, have felt the invigorating whiffs of fresh wind and are impatient of the cobwebs on the minds of their official spokesmen.

Not all these are alive to the fact that the peacemaking is but the liquidation of an antiquated order and that an organization of the new is the paramount task to which they must address themselves, for the war now sadly won hardly more than an episode of world convulsion which has shaken all human institutions to the foundations.

OLD GUARANTEES WON'T SUFFICE

The doctrine of legitimate national guarantees which has not yet gone out of vogue will hardly suffice to construct a new international fabric. Among the conjectures in which old-fashioned politicians take pleasure is that one affirming that President Wilson's pusillanimity obtained Kaiserism statesmen who edified across the Atlantic will after the interference of the rulers of Europe be bedaubed to circumstances and to temperaments which have no analogy to theirs. But certain key positions can under no circumstances be surrendered, for example, the limitation of armaments insistently demanded by the people, but which, lacking effective guarantees, will not be achieved without strenuous effort and the sacrifice of many cherished ante-bellum antes.

This is one of these tangible results by which nations, with their normalcy-loving sense of reality, will assess the value of the world's transformation and of its peoples. Unless the new politics of social reforms is based on really solid foundations, the peoples with their strongly marked way of appreciating unforeseen events may not only give loud utterance to central truths, but take decisive steps to act upon them.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Would Wake With Burning and Itching, Cuticura Heals.

"I had two large eruptions around my mouth and my forehead was covered with pimples. The pimples started in as little specks, form. My face was very much disfigured and I would wake with the burning and itching.

"I saw an advertisement for Cuticura and I sent for a free sample. I bought a cake of Soap and a box of Ointment and I was healed." (Signed) Miss Amelia White, Box 671, Litchfield, Conn., June 4, 1918.

Sample each free by return mail. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. X, Malden, Mass." Sold everywhere.

OPPOSITION TO LEAGUE FORMS IN SENATE

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

Washington, Jan. 1.—The powerful and persistent advocacy by the Hearst newspapers for going forward with the peace treaty promptly, speedily winding up our affairs in Europe, bringing our soldiers home and getting down to a supreme consideration of our own great and pressing national affairs, is finding an echo of approval both in Washington and in Paris.

The United States is almost in a ferment over the execution of the plan. The Republican minority—soon to be a majority—is almost a unit in favor of it. Hoke Smith and James A. Reed and Thomas and Hardwick and other leading Democratic Senators are advocating it.

Lodge, the Republican leader, is marshalling and moving his soon-to-be majority for a vigorous insistence on this policy.

SENATORS AGAINST LEAGUE.

It is claimed in the Senate that at least forty-one Senators could be counted to pledge opposition to the inclusion of the League of Nations, which seems to be the obstruction and delaying feature of the treaty. There is a strong movement on foot to secure the signatures of thirty-three Senators to a pledge not to vote for any peace treaty which contains a provision for the league of nations.

This would inevitably mean its defeat in the Senate. The circulation of such a pledge would be formal notice to Paris and Europe that the inclusion of the league of nations would be a waste of time and would echo that peace for which the world is clamoring. Two-thirds vote is necessary to ratify a treaty.

Many of this claim of forty-one Senators, however, is not official, although strongly and positively made.

The Senate majority, which is now non-partisan, believes invaluable time is being wasted in holding our way any longer toward the decisions of the peace delegates. It is nearly eight weeks since the armistice was signed, and six since the President went to Europe. Our armies are still two-thirds on the other side.

FIGHTING FURTHER DELAYS.

What the Republicans are fighting now is "time lost" and "delay" more than a league of nations idea, which with its general principles indorsed they believe can be adjusted in its machinery later.

Lodge, Republican leader, does not wish to break down forcibly the President's plan. He merely protests the fact that it is delaying the conclusion of the peace treaty and the return of the American soldiers to their homes.

It is strongly suggested and entirely possible that if the peace treaty is longer delayed a decisive vote will be demanded in the House and Senate upon the proposition to bring all our American troops home at once.

The apprehension is gaining currency in Paris. It is reported among Americans and the lesser countries that the material demands of the greater Allies for territory and indemnities and the strenuous punishment of Germany, and that the sooner the delegates come together and thresh out these questions while some, at least, of the great American ideals are intact and dominant, the sooner the world may be at peace.

NEW ENGLAND MEN ARE LEADING "ACES"

Two New England men are among the five American aviators credited with more than ten victories over the Germans in the war in the air. They were Major Ludbery of Wallingford, Ct., killed in action, who is credited with downing seventeen planes, and First Lieutenant David F. Putnam of Brookline, who accounted for twelve.

SOCIETY NOTES

Miss Dorothy Washburn of No. 335 Commonwealth avenue, who is donating all her time this season to war work. She is a member of the 1917-18 Sewing Circle and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Washburn.

By SARA ORCUTT.

Miss Dorothy Batchelder is today the guest of honor at a luncheon given by her aunt, Mrs. Arthur W. Hartt of "Rockwood," Goddard avenue, Brookline, at the Chilton Club. Miss Batchelder is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Batchelder of No. 29 Bradlee road, Medford. She is a debutante of this season and a member of the Sewing Circle.

* * *

Major Jasper Whiting, U. S. A., returned from overseas in time to be with Mrs. Whiting for the holidays. Major and Mrs. Whiting are for a while at the Copley-Plaza. Mrs. Whiting was formerly Marion Mott Bohlsinger of Brookline. Mrs. Arthur Perrin of No. 122 Fisher avenue is a sister of Mrs. Whiting.

Judging from the sale of tickets, there will be a large audience at Jordan Hall tonight to hear Colonel Robert H. C. Kelton speak on "The Miracle of Chateau-Thierry" and the striking motion pictures showing American troops in action at Chateau-Thierry and the advance over "No Man's Land" will be shown. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Boston branch of the "Special Aid Society for American Preparedness."

TWO NEW ENGLAND BOYS CITED FOR BRAVERY

Washington, Jan. 11.—The commander-in-chief, in the name of the President, has awarded the distinguished service cross to the following-named officer and soldier for the acts of extraordinary heroism described after their names:

Private (First Class) John Maslosky, Company K, 311th Infantry, U. S. No. 2413727. For extraordinary service in action near Grandpre, France. Private Maslosky displayed exemplary devotion to duty in attacking machine gun nests without aid, capturing many prisoners. For several hours he worked in advance of the company, and although believed to have been lost, he later returned, bringing with him more prisoners. Home address: Mr. George Wiseman, cousin, R. F. D. No. 2, Williamsburg, Mass.

First Lieutenant Lloyd A. Hamilton (deceased), 17th Aero Squadron. For extraordinary heroism in action at Varrsenuerc, Belgium, August 13, 1918. Leading a low bombing attack on a German aerodrome thirty miles behind the lines, Lieutenant Hamilton destroyed the hangars on the north side of the aerodrome and then attacked a row of enemy machines, flying as low as twenty feet from the ground despite intense machine gun fire, and setting fire to three of the German planes. He then turned and fired bursts through the windows of the chateau in which the German pilots were quartered, twenty-six of whom were afterward reported killed. Next of kin, Rev. John A. Hamilton, father, No. 25 Buell street, Burlington, Vt.

BABY SWALLOWS A BEAN AND DIES

Framingham, Jan. 11.—An ordinary white bean swallowed by Beulah, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Merrill of Warren road, proved fatal. Physicians at Union Avenue Hospital, Framingham, are puzzled by the case.

NARROW RANGE, HEAVY TONE, IN STOCKS

Boston Market Is Quiet, but Shows a Slight Upward Tendency

The New York market opened quiet and firm. Prices moved within a narrow range. The tone became heavy and prices irregular in the second hour.

U. S. Steel started at 31⅝, after selling at 32 it yielded ¼ at 31⅝, then rallied to 31¾, its last night's close. Bethlehem B sold down from 61¼ to 60½, off ¾, and Crucible lost ½, at 55½. Baldwin Locomotive receded from 74¼ to 73⅝, off ⅝.

Reading rose ⅛ to 81¼, Ss. Pacific dropped from 104⅝ to 104, but the last changed, and Union Pacific lost ¼ at 125⅛. Brooklyn R. T. lost ⅜ at 24½, and Interborough at 19⅜.

Mexican Petroleum sold from 182⅝ to 179, and rallied to 180, off 2. Marland Oil was unchanged at 102½. General Motors lost 1 at 125⅛ and Studebaker ⅛ at 51⅞. Beet Sugar receded to 69⅞, off 1⅝ and Cuba Cane Sugar lost 1, at 29⅝. Tobacco Products was up ⅛ at 78⅜ and Cigar Stores 1⅝, at 115.

The local market was quiet. Boston Elevated was up ¼ at 71. Swift & Co. ⅛ at 124⅛ and Am. Tel. & Tel. ¼ at 101⅝. Mass. Electric pfd. sold unchanged at 34⅜ after selling at 34½. Gorton-New 21¾, Century Steel 12¾, Fairbanks 47¾, Lamson Store 52½, United Fruit 162½, Island Oil 8 and Stewart 25 were also unchanged.

Copper Range lost ⅛ at 41⅛, United Shoe ⅛ at 41½, Mohawk ⅛ at 53¾ and Ventura Oil ⅛ at 35⅛.

THEATRES

BEACON THEATRE

Rest and Wet are spanned in the photoplays to be drawn together for the first times in Boston through all the week at the Beacon Theatre. "Little Women," the delightful story classic of youth which did more to endear Louisa M. Alcott to readers than any other of her stories, will be given in pictured version. This charming tale of folks of a previous generation in the little old town of Concord is as human and compelling a chronicle as any in American literature. The other photoplay will be "Bonds of Honor," picturing Sessue Hayakawa in a stirring romance. For comedy there will be shown Patty Arbuckle in "Camping Out."

"GLORIANNA"

Beginning Monday evening, Jan. 27, John Cort will bring another of his musical comedy successes, "Glorianna," for a two weeks' engagement. The book and lyrics are by Catherine Chisholm Cushing and the music by Rudolph Friml. Urban of the magic color brush has created the scenery. The cast is uniformly excellent, and includes Herbert Corthell, Dorothy South, Bradford Kirkbride, Emilie Lea, Dorothy Maynard, Robert C. Adams and James Mack.

BOSTON THEATRE

Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton are the stars in "The Prodical Wife," which is the leading screen feature at the Boston Theatre the coming week. It is a powerful drama of the rebirth of a woman's soul through love. It also brings out the powerful acting ability of this wonderful team.

The vaudeville bill is an extremely attractive one and includes Ray and Eleanor Hall in a big musical specialty, Helen Stanley in a review of singing and dancing, Toney and Norman in a big musical comedy offering.

MODERN THEATRE

Louisa M. Alcott's immortal story of childhood, "Little Women," will be shown in screen form through the week at the Modern Theatre as one of the two first-run photoplays on the bill. This charming chronicle of events in the old town of Concord concerning the family of girls which Miss Alcott wrote stands as one of the most engaging stories in fiction. There was compelling power in the printed page, and perforce there should be equal compellment, if not more, in the pictured version. The companion photoplay will be "Bonds of Honor," announced as a vivid and moving drama, with the Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, in the leading role. There will also be given the first showings of Patty Arbuckle in "Camping Out."

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Buoyant and more beautiful than ever, Anita Stewart met such an ovation in her new photoplay, presented last week, that Gordon's Olympia is continuing her for a second showing this week in "Virtuous Wives." Owen Johnson's famously successful story, which is nothing less than a sensation in its own right. Thousands were turned away last week for sheer lack of seats, and one does not wonder why after having seen the play.

The vaudeville program is an extremely vivid one and will assuredly prove delightful. Pesci Duo present a delightful musical act, both singing and instrumental. Barber and Jackson give twenty minutes of just mirth and comedy. Seymour and Seymour have a most pretentious variety act. The Fadrons present a wonderful novelty acrobatic offering. Other good acts and the Olympia News Weekly complete the bill.

TREMONT TEMPLE

"A Romance of the Air," the photoplay picturing Lieutenant Hall, the noted ace and member of the original Lafayette Escadrille, begins its second week at the Tremont Temple. There are many qualities this photoplay possesses besides the distinction of having such a noted aviator as its leading player. Chief of these is the thrilling nature of the scenes in the air.

THE NEXT SYMPHONY CONCERT

The program of the Boston Symphony concerts for next Friday and Saturday will be Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C minor, Saint-Saens' Symphonic Poem, "Phaeton," Lalo's Rhapsody for orchestra in A, and Mendelssohn's violin concerto in E minor, with the new concertmaster,

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Two photoplay bills, promising full measure of entertainment, are announced for the week at Loew's Columbia Theatre. For the first half there will be shown Norma Talmadge in "The Heart of Wetona," a picturing of David Belasco's popular drama of the West, wherein Miss Talmadge is seen as a little Indian girl. The other photoplay is Wallace Reid in "Two Many Millions," a comic story of adventure in finance. The bill for the last half will include Douglas Fairbanks in "Arizona"; Dorothy Gish and Robert Herron in David W. Griffith's "The Greatest Thing in Life."

BURTON HOLMES

"With the Tanks in Paris" is the title of the second travelogue in Burton Holmes' series, now being given here. It was there last July and August, when "Big Bertha" was still sending her deadly shells into this one-time tourist Mecca. The broadcard and the sugar ticket and the ban on nothing oftener than twice a week—if you must have hot water—were still in vogue, and the siren whistle in the night, warning every- at home.

one of an impending air raid, was still a frequent occurrence. In spite of the deadly darkness of the streets and boulevards after 9:30 at night, day-time Paris was still the City Wonderful. American boys in khaki seemed as numerous as the native-born, and they seemed almost as much

WHAT MOTHER THINKS

In a recent letter Mrs. M. E. Ford, the mother of these two healthy children writes: "I use Father John's Medicine in all cases of coughs and colds, also as a tonic. It is invaluable in the home, especially where there are small children, it is such an excellent tonic and pleasant to take. My home is never without a bottle of Father John's Medicine." (Signed) Mrs. M. E. Ford, 214 Lonsdale Avenue, Pawtucket, R. I.

Thousands of mothers say they keep their children well and strong and build them up after colds and coughs by giving them Father John's Medicine, which is pure and wholesome and guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

3 NEW PLAYS FOR FIRST NIGHTERS

Local first nighters will be rather puzzled next Monday when two New York successes appeal for patronage at the Wilbur and Shubert theatres, respectively. They are "The Eyes of Youth," a fantastic comedy, which ran nearly a season in the big city, and "The Kiss Burglar," a musical entertainment which also enjoyed a large measure of popularity.

"The Eyes of Youth" began its run in New York with Marjorie Rambeau in the leading role. This young woman broke a limb while skating and retired from the cast. A succession of leading women followed her, but it was not until Alma Tell was secured that the management was contented.

Miss Tell will be remembered by those who saw "The Melting of Molly" last season. Incidentally, the comedy has now been turned over into a musical show and is doing well in New York.

Critics Shooed Away.

There would be three openings instead of two Monday if the Selwyns hadn't decided to give the first performance of "The Crowded Hour" to an invitation audience of army and navy men. Even the critics have been shooed away from the Park Square Theatre, and they will not be allowed to see the attraction until Tuesday. As "The Crowded Hour" is a melodrama with some very intense war interest the appropriateness of such a performance is obvious.

Stealing Kisses.

"The Kiss Burglar" when first presented offered Fay Bainter, a young woman who is still a stranger in Boston, in the leading role. She has been succeeded by Marie Carroll, ste prima donna of the New York company of "Oh, Boy." It is a romantic comic opera, said to contain novel situations and merry melodies.

Willette Made the Fur Fly.

Just to prove that the New York company is not always the original company, "The Crowded Hour" comes to Boston direct from Chicago, where the initial production was made, with the original company headed by Willette Kershaw intact.

The Cowl may be playing the leading role in New York, but the gloves will put up by Miss Kershaw against her managers, of whom Mina Cowl is one, has unquestionably brought about a situation whereby the New York audiences with they could see the young woman in the role.

When it comes to playing loose and easy principled chorus girl Willette Kershaw has no superior. Years ago in "The Country Boy" she made a hit as the chorus girl who vamped the youthful hero of that ingenuous drama.

Four years ago she electrified New York as the street walker in "Any Night." The run of that little drama at the Princess Theatre was interrupted by Miss Kershaw fainting upon the stage and being carried off with erysipelas.

After she had recovered the doctors found that her lungs were weak and she needed a dry climate. She went to Switzerland, but the outbreak of the war sent her back to the United States.

Completely recovered, she has made the sensation of the season in "The Crowded Hour," in which she plays a young woman of the pleasure loving type. She goes to the front as a telephone operator and in one hour redeems all the sins of her past life.

Such a rise was this production in Chicago that the Selwyns, who were rather shy on hits and had a lot of time on their hands in New York, determined not to disturb the original company, but to immediately open in New York with another troupe headed by Jane Cowl in the same piece.

Wires Hot.

Then the war began. Willette Kershaw declared that she was defrauded of her chance in New York. The friends of Jane Cowl retaliated. The squabble between the actresses kept the wires hot between New York and Chicago hot, too.

I presume the press agents didn't hesitate to blow upon the fire to keep it going, for the unusual characters in the dispute cast "The Crowded Hour" into all sorts of publicity. The result was a victory for the managers, of course, but Willette Kershaw hasn't suffered any from all the celebrity she got.

Carefully Selected Samples.

When it comes to the English comedies we see are so much brighter, smoother and more interesting than the run of that sort of stuff constructed by our own playwrights.

That is a fair question, and it deserved an answer. Every English comedy, "The Saving Grace," which Cyril Maude is doing at the Tremont, and "The Cheats," which Lyn Harding and Barrymore appeared not long ago at the Hollis, actually are not up to the ruck of American high comedies. Lots of people who have sampled them have told me that they didn't appeal over us anyway and such plays prove conclusive.

As it happens they are comparing carefully selected samples with the ordinary run of our native productions, and naturally the latter shine.

There are forty or fifty new plays produced in England every season. Perhaps two or three of them are first rate, the others vary from indifferent to bad. Our native managers can't afford the big success and we never hear of any of the others save when Henry Jewett digs one up because he needs a novelty at the Copley.

New York makes more productions each year than London, and the British managers are standing around with their skimmers to catch the cream of the American product. It is inevitable that two or three American plays per season will be found to please London audiences, with the run of London productions. Even Shaw, whose work is essentially polished English comedy, found London audiences slow to realize that a selected few of us possessed very few of their traits. Even in London would make as much adaptations. His work would stand up reasonably in comparison with the best of the English actors.

So let us smile. Maybe they are better than we think, but we mustn't admit.

Opera, After All.

A city so large as Boston should never be left without opera for an entire season, and William Wade Hinshaw, for years a leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera House, has leaped into the breach left by the demise of the Chicago and Metropolitan companies.

Hinshaw's organization includes a number of well known names. For four months it has been giving New York good opera and operetta at ordinary theatre prices and a similar policy will prevail in Boston. The support of American singers so raised will be greatly strengthened for its Boston engagement, both chorus and orchestra being drawn from the Metropolitan organization.

There are two kinds of people who go to opera: those who love music and those who merely stare and clothes. The safest make the most fuhbub for the former, but the latter support.

Having seen Hinshaw's productions in New York I can assure Boston lovers of music that the organization presents the best opera at 2.50 prices that has been seen here since Henry Russell in the Castle Square company played the Majestic Theatre at those prices two years ago. I am interested when Jordan is in permanent grand opera in Boston.

It must not be confounded with the Aborns, Gaito San Carlo, which came here two years ago, or similar troupes. Such singers as Marcella Craft, Margarete Teyte, Marguerite Sylva, Bianca Scroya, Lucy Gates, Orville Harrold, Riccardo Martin, Orville Harrold and David Bispham command respect.

Lancashire Lasses.

That dozen of girls who drill and dance so effectually in Fred Stone's "Jack o' Lantern" are known as the Sunshine Troupe and are British importations.

They all hail from Manchester, and are graduates of the Tiller Ballet school. The girls were regularly apprenticed to Tiller, the ballet master, and are still under his control so far as engagements are concerned.

Mary Reed is captain of the little company, and a stern disciplinarian. They have appartments of their own and live like one family. Incidentally it is a little expensive, as more than thirty service stars and five gold stars. Each has a father, mother, brother, sweetheart, or all three in the British forces. One of them, however, has resented the epithet by carrying a boy in the U. S. Naval Aerial Service.

Referring to Jack o' Lantern, one would think that the laborious skating stunt by Fred Stone and company performance would give him a tummy full of slipping around on the ice.

Not so. He does it three times a week he gets out upon the rink at the Hearst-Vitagraph studio and slides around for a couple of hours. Wednesday morning a skating party of friends will join him and he will be there recognized. Stone. Nothing would do except a exhibition, and the good natured actor did all his stunts for them.

An Old Time Friend.

"The Story of the Rosary," which is the bill for next week at the Castle Square, is one of those old-fashioned melodramas with a kick in every scene which put up a losing fight in the movies and which have vanished from the legitimate stage.

Occasionally an exceptional melodrama of the old school appears, such as "The Story of the Rosary" is one of the best of the kind in years, but also carries no English walking stick to descend to his wrist by a strap, has opened the fast by dropping any acquaintance with Joe Miller, the London Punch and the Farmer's Almanac. Therefore I am presuming the following melodramatic situations will be safe and without further comment:

Alice Lane, Mary Pickford, Frederic Wilkerspoon in "Leave It to Jane," Ethel Clayton in "Eyes of Youth," who is now living in Boston, and this man had a reputation of being close to Mr. Lasky's ear, and he is the most urgent invitation to accompany him to dinner.

When they got home the man's wife said:

"But my dear, we have nothing in the house."

"Well, pshy well eat something," replied the man. "Here's a quarter. Get a nickels bottle of beer and kill the bloomin' canary bird and we'll have a jolly feast."

More Shaw.

"The Doctor's Dilemma," is a Bernard Shaw comedy which ran for a long time recently in London. Owing to the enterprise of the Jewett Players, it will have its first local production at the Copley next week. As several of the leading members at the Copley have had the advantage of personal instruction from the Irish dramatist, and as Shaw plays are invariably well done in the Back Bay Theatre it should seem as though "The Doctor's Dilemma" were one of those things which shouldn't be missed.

McISAAC says that

"THE BETTER 'OLE" is a quaint and entertaining evening with some British Tommies in the trenches and out. Snappy music and a competent English company. Hollis.

"LEAVE IT TO JANE," a deft musical comedy version of George Ade's droll comedy, "The College Widow," with Oscar Shaw and a good cast. Music tuneful and catchy. Majestic.

CYRIL MAUDE IN "THE SAVING GRACE," a sweet and very charming little British comedy, with just a fanoff murmur of drums. Tremont.

"LOMBARDI, LIMITED," an amusing farce comedy set in a dressmaker's shop with Leo Carrillo as the central figure and Grace Valentine in a curious role. Plymouth.

FRED STONE IN "JACK O' LANTTERN," a characteristic Dillingham production which is playing to gigantic audiences. Colonial.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE

In a season that has been productive of many important theatrical offerings, no play stands forth more prominently than "The Crowded Hour," the new play by Edgar Selwyn and Channing Pollock, announced for a brief Boston engagement beginning Thursday evening, January 11, at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre. "The Crowded Hour" is the story of a man and woman who had failed to realize the big possibilities of life and deliberately wasting their days. There comes a time when they are suddenly aroused to their senses and with the inspiration of the war which provides the authors ample opportunity for the ingenious and gripping situations, bright lines and striking comedy. There are no stars in the play. It is solely a play in which Americans and Americanisms are the heroes of the great struggle, of the nursing of souls, the exaltation of character above the temptations of the senses, the world and the deeds of courage and service. The cast is made up of a host of fine players, headed by Willette Kershaw, a St. Louis girl, who has not been seen in Boston for nearly a dozen years. Miss Kershaw essays the role of the "Follies" girl, others in the company include Allan Dinehart, Lillian Albertson, William Keighley, Hale Norcross, E. J. De Valda, Andre Cassin, George Lesser and a score of others.

WILBUR THEATRE

The attraction at the Wilbur Theatre, starting next Monday night, will be H. Woods and the Messrs. Selbert dramatic success, "Eyes of Youth."

With the pictures seen in the Hindu seer's crystal as the motif, the playwright, Alan Marten, and Charles Guernon, have given their audiences some of the most romantic and stage scenes created for a generation. The latitude which the above themes give to the writing of plays as the instrument of foretelling the future that awaited their characters is why of the careers she contemplated is magnificently utilized. They have overlooked no possibilities to make their play sweep the audiences off their feet.

The "Eyes of Youth" teaches a lesson to youth—and to middle age and old age as well—in a delightful fashion. Gina Ashling, portrayed by Miss Tell, has several careers open to her. She can stay at home and help in the family, she can become an opera singer or she can marry a rich man. She does none of these seemingly desirable things, but marries the poor man whom she loves, as is explained in the action of the play.

The company includes Alma Tell, Gordon Mertis, Frances Grayson, William Bonelli, Marie Malcroni, Paul Nicholson, Harry D. Southard, Harold Heaton, Judson Langill, Albert Rochardi, Louis Alter, Charlotte Gaylord and others.

THE SHUBERT

"The Kiss Burglar," the musical comedy, which the Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert will present at the Shubert Theatre next week, beginning Monday night, contains a charming and amusing and ingenious story. The musical comedy is in two acts and five scenes all of which are laid in New York at the present time. The heroine of "The Kiss Burglar," is Arline, granddaughter of Orry, who, on account of the war finds herself in New York. She is stopping with a New York couple anxious to get into society. The story grows out of the fact that a young American bachelor, who a year before in Trieste had fallen in love with Arline, but had to flee for his life after knocking down a prince for cheating at cards, escaped his pursuers by dashing through an open window into a dark room, where he found himself confronted by a beautiful woman, who, taking him for a burglar, had offered him her jewels, on the condition that, as she fainted in his arms. The featured members of the cast are Marie Carroll and Dennis Maley with a long list of clever principals, as well as the famous Peerless Alley chorus. Miss Carroll has come into recent prominence throughout her native Canada as "The Melting Stones," in "Nothing But the Truth," and "Oh, Boy." Mr. Maley was last seen here in "Very Good Eddie," as the fresh country hotel clerk. There is a long list of capable principals.

COPLEY THEATRE

"The Doctor's Dilemma," one of the best-known and most-talked-about of Bernard Shaw's plays, has been a long time coming to the Boston stage. Its production by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley Theatre is the first time in Boston.

It is needless to say that "The Doctor's Dilemma" is worth waiting for. Its action centres around one Sir Colenso Ridgeon, who is an eminent London surgeon. He has a cure for consumption which he has kept a secret. Louis Dubedat, a painter, appears to be a satisfactory candidate for treatment by the famous physician's secret method. He is married to a beautiful woman, Jennifer, who adores him. She beseeches Ridgeon to save her husband, and he responds to her appeal with a reluctant consent. At the time of Dubedat's consultation is held upon Dubedat's case, and all agree that the prospective patient is a mean-spirited, pitiful egotist, who has attempted to borrow money from many of them. With all the characteristic Shavian cynical humor is developed the plot of the play from this starting point.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

For its first production in Boston the Castle Square Stock Company will present during the coming week "The Story of the Rosary," one of the most popular of English melodramas ever brought to this country. It is a play of the hour, having had a run of an entire season in London and a long engagement in New York. It is the work of Walter Howard, well known as an author of melodrama, and in the course of its four acts and eleven scenes it presents a remarkable and realistic drama of love and adventure.

The events of "The Story of the Rosary" happen in continental Europe in the middle of the years of the war. Its plot discloses the staunch love of a brave army captain for an impoverished princess and the many heart-changing scenes show a series of graphic and picturesque episodes. In and out of its theme are woven the threads of drama and comedy. The audience will watch the progress of the princess' father, it will see the villainous attempt to lure her made by the captain's rival, and it will sorrow with the heroine as her lover departs for the wilderness of war and leaves her the bride of an hour.

GAYETY THEATRE

Coming to the Gayety Theatre next week and continuing for the entire week Monday matinee, are the "Million Dollar Dolls," a jovial group of pretty maids and flashy costumes. Two and one-half hours of merriment will be the main total of the performance which the company will offer. There is a big brand new two act musical comedy revue, entitled "In a Whirl of Pleasure" programmed, and in addition there will be a host of special features interpolated in the performance.

In selecting the personnel which is of "Camping Out."

included in the cast to be seen here Mr. John G. Jermon who personally directs the enterprise has evidently come into the ranks of burlesque from end to end. For the completed roster of the Dolls' organization will be found with names well known in stageland. Among the principals of the cast are Edie Mae, the charming young California prima donna; Flossie Everette, in short and Pearl Carrell in Soubrette Harry, a clever ingenue; Cliff Bragdon, the eccentric trampy comedian; Tom Gillen, Charles Mac, James Peck and Harold Carr.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Mlle. Nita Jo, one of France's most popular character singers, will make her American debut as the headliner at Keith's Theatre the coming week. The star is coming to Boston with a wealth of interesting production the producers were delighted to discover that the bill is based on Concord, Mass., was well preserved and the atmosphere of the book would be secured when the bill was presented. Even the book was written, the consent of the surviving members of the family was secured to use the names of the characters and familiar points in Concord were utilized for the production. The bill will offer a new comedy "When He Comes Back," La Bernicia, assisted by the Misses Lillian and Nellie Kia Wah Na, will offer a musical specialty. A. Robins and brothers will offer an eccentric act of comedy. Both are former members of the musical show Katinka. Mirano Brothers and Company will offer a comedy. Bob Creighton is a clever single performer. Beeman and Anderson are speed boys with plenty of fun.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

An all-star bill of vaudeville and a program of photo features musical in picture-giving qualities are announced for the first half of the week at the Orpheum Theatre. Included in the vaudeville are Jimmy Simmons, an individual entertainer whose mannerisms are varied and unusual, both in point of distinctiveness and effectiveness, will present his skit, "The Raw Recruit." Jones and Harry, artistic singers and musicians, will offer a new singing and musical offering. Maloney and Rogers will be seen in their singing sketch, "A Seashore Flirtation." Grace and Tabee in their humorous skit, "After the Wedding"; the three Herbert Sisters, English entertainers, and Gillette and Gillette. On the screen there will be shown the latest news reel and the first showings of Fatty Arbuckle in his comedy of the woods and attendant comic adventure, "Camping Out," and the return of "The Silver King," with Wilfred Lucas and Miss Barbara Gilroy in the leading roles.

The picturing of such a well known star as Mr. Faversham lends distinction, magnifying its right of appeal. The bill for the last half will include as headliners "The Right Dominoes," operatic songsters, and Frank Bush, the noted story-teller. Others will be Gill and Vesk; Donahue and Fletcher; Watkins and Williams; Nat Burns, and on the screen continued showings

TRY IT IN YOUR BACK YARD

Much has been made of the spectacular end of flying as detailed in reports and testimony of eyewitnesses as well as of fliers themselves in commenting on this most necessary branch of the aviator's art. it was thought in the early days of the war that the war fliers was merely show, but it was quickly proven that the ability to do startling stunts with their machine was absolutely necessary for their lives. And none is more keen in promoting this art than is Lieutenant Bert Hall, the American ace, member of the original Lafayette Escadrille, who appears in his aerial photoplay, "A Romance of the Air," at the Tremont Temple.

"Many people have asked me how these stunts are done," said Lieutenant Hall. "Pretty simple, the simplest, yet apparently the most unfeasible. All you have to do when you head into the wind, as others wire you would slip out of a bad jam. You simply pull up on your elevator. When you are on your back you roll the motor, and after passing the 250 degree mark of the circle you let your engine dive. When on your nose you pull up, straighten out, put on your contact and there you are. No bad sensation, only a little gassing in your face. Many think they might fall out. The momentum will hold you in your seat."

Silver King Filmed.

Back in the days of our fathers when melodrama was in its full bloom and the American stage boasted of a certain number of sure-fire success in some of the variety, in the front one of the list and rivalling its fellow-melodramas in the respect was "The Silver King." This play was an early product of Henry Arthur Jones' pen from which he was to flow a remarkable series of plays that successfully defied the perils "melo" in the matter of designation. Its first performance was at London in 1882, but within a few months of its premiere it was presented at Wallack's Theatre, New York, on January 23, 1883.

There was then the old spectacle of the same play leading the lists of successes in England and America. At least it was in those early days. London continued to harbor the play for several seasons as a standard attraction, and after rounding out several months in New York took to the road for a prolonged tour. Hardly a stagetreader of that generation but knows the story of the drama, and it has been one of the most dependable properties in every theatrical office of many traveling repertoire or resident stock companies. Many of the actors are players of the English-speaking stage of today got their first training in it. Now it is a photoplay. The producers announce the appearance of William Faversham in the leading role, its first showings being at the Tremont Temple this week and at the Globe the first half of next week.

Concord Invaded.

It is more than half a century since Louisa M. Alcott wrote "Little Women," but not more than half a dozen years since the famous book was turned into a play. When the first dramatization of the story of Concord, Mass., was well preserved and the atmosphere of the book could be secured when the bill was presented. Even the book was written, the consent of the surviving members of the family was secured to use the names of the characters and familiar points in Concord were utilized for the production. The bill will open whom Miss Alcott based her book are still living and they kindly assisted the producers in many ways. The photoplay is being shown at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week.

WALDRON'S CASINO

"The Twentieth Century Maids" will be at Waldron's Casino all next week. The comedy places most of its responsibility upon the shoulders of in the amusing two-act vehicle "All in Fun," by Lew Fields and Percy Kennie, an escaped lunatic. Barton makes this one of the most laugh-provoking characters he has ever played and he is supported by such talent as Billy Hamilton, Ethel Barton, Lillian and Madlyn Worth, the soubrette; Florence Hamilton, prima donna; Tillie Barton, the ingenue; Juliette, the Rae Time; Hollister, Bob Golden and Harold Young, straight man. The organization is completed by a chorus of forty girls, who will offer specialty singing and dancing ability.

GLOBE THEATRE

There is convincing promise in each item of the announcement of photoplay subjects which constitutes the bill for the week at the Globe Theatre. The first showing will be given of William Farnum in his comedy Silver King," a filming in modernized version of the famous play by Henry Arthur Jones. In six dramatic acts a few plays which have attained and kept the signally great popularity which this play has won. It is an excellent example of melodrama, and in stage version has served as vehicle for a number of eminent stars. The companion photoplay will be "The Secret Garden," picturing Lila Lee. There will also be given the first showings of Fatty Arbuckle in "Camping Out."

Hearst's Magazine for January

Hall Caine

MOST magnificent of all the messages that have come to us across the seas is Hall Caine's "Babylon The Great Is Fallen!"

Not even our own President has achieved a more exalted ideal. And in no Nation has speaker or writer ever summed up in clearer or more convincing words what War has done—and what a proper Peace can do!

"Lying out on the battlefield in his agony, the soldier has always had a dim consciousness of a day that was coming when the bloody business for which he was dying would be done."

Is not that vision about to be realized at last, asks Sir Hall Caine. The time has come, argues the great Englishman, for the noblest of all empires—the Empire of Humanity!

IF you are not interested in the opinions of the world's great thinkers, you won't want Hearst's this month or any other. But if you want—in their own words—what real world leaders have to say, don't fail to read Hall Caine's "Babylon The Great Is Fallen" in the January number of

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the drawing of the first lottery in England. The event took place in 1569 in St. Paul's Cathedral. Lotteries still flourish in Europe. In this country they were abolished some years ago. They are sources of government revenue in Cuba and Mexico.

This Day in Our History

THIS is the anniversary of the defeat of the British in the attack on New Orleans in 1815. Sir Edward Pakenham, who led the assault against Andrew Jackson, was killed. The battle was fought after the declaration of peace between England and the United States.

The Man Who Lost Himself

By H. DE VERE STACPOOLE

Absorbing and Humorous Tale of a Philadelphia Business Man Who Had a Title Thrust Upon Him in London

CHAPTER XXII.—Continued

"WELL, he won't escape," said the Duke. "I'll see to that."

"Quite so, but there is another matter." The Commissioners in Lunacy."

"Well, what about them?"

"It is the habit of the commissioners to visit every establishment registered under the act and, unfortunately, they are men—I mean of course that, fortunately, they are men of the most absolute probity, but given to over-riding, sometimes, the considered opinion of those in close touch with the cases they are brought in contact with. They would undoubtedly make strict inquiries into the truth of the story that Lord Rochester has just put up, and the result—I can quite see it—would drift us into one of those exposés, those painful and interminable lawsuits, destructive alike to property, to dignity, and that ease of mind inseparable from health and the enjoyment of those positions to which my labors and Your Grace's lineage entitle us."

"Damn the commissioners," suddenly broke out His Grace. "Do you mean to say they would doubt my word?"

"Unfortunately, it is not a question of that," said Simms. "It is a question of what they call the liberty of the subject."

Liberty of Subject

"Damn the liberty of the subject—liberty of the subject. When a man's mad what right has he to liberty—liberty to cut people's throats maybe. Look at that fool Arthur, liberty! Look at the use he made of his liberty when he had it. Look at what he did to Langwathby? sent a telegram leading him to believe that his wife had broken out again—you know how she drinks—and had been jailed in Carlisle. And the thing was so artfully constructed, it said almost nothing. You couldn't touch him on it. Simply said, 'Go at once to police court Carlisle.' See the art of it? Never mentioned the woman's name. There was no libel. Langwathby, to prosecute, would have to explain all about his wife. He went. What happened? You know his temper. He went to Langwathby Castle before going to the police court, and the first person he saw was his wife. Before all the servants. Before all the servants, mind you, she accused him of that disgraceful affair in Pont street where he was turned out in his pajamas—and they half ripped off him—by Lord Tanore's brother. Tango over him anything of it. Never would, but he knows now, for Lucy Jerningham was at Langwathby when the scene occurred and she's told him. The result is poor Langwathby will find himself in the D. C. Liberty? What right has a man like that to talk of liberty?"

"Quite so," said Simms, utterly despairing of pressing home the truth of the horrible situation upon this brain in blankness. "Quite so. But facts are facts, and the fact remains that this man—I mean—er—Lord Rochester, possesses on paper own shares, property, trafi and subtlety. And he will use that with the Commissioners in Lunacy when they call."

"Ah, that's just it. They visit asylums and registered houses at their own will and convenient surprise is one of their methods. They may arrive at Hoover's any time. I say, literally, any time. Sometimes they arrive at a house in the middle of the night, they may leave an order unvisited for a month and then come twice in one week, and they hold everyone concerned literally in the hollows of their hands. If disturbed admittance they would not hesitate to break the doors down. Their power is absolute."

"But, good God, sir," cried the Duke, "what you tell me is monstrous. It's un-English. Break into a man's house, spy upon him in the middle of the night! Why, such powers vested in a body of men make for terrorization. This must be seen to. I will speak about it in the House."

"Quite so, but, meanwhile, there is the danger, and it must be faced."

"I'll take him away from Hoover's."

"Ah," said Simms.

"I'll put him somewhere where these fellows won't be able to interfere. How about my place at Skibo?"

Simms shook his head.

"He is under a certificate," said he. "The commissioners call at Hoover's, inspect the books, find that Lord Rochester has been there, find him gone, find you have taken him away. They will simply call upon you to produce him."

"How about my yacht?" asked the other.

"A long sea voyage for his health?"

"Ah," said Simms, "that's better, but voyages come to an end."

"How about my villa at Naples? Properly looked after there, he will be safe enough."

"Of course," said Simms, "that will mean he will always have to be there—always."

"Of course, always. D'you think now I have got him in safety I will let him out?"

Simms sighed. The business was drifting into very dangerous waters. He knew for a matter of fact and also by intuition that Jones was Jones, and that Rochester was dead, and his unfortunate position was like this:

1. If Jones escaped from Hoover's unsoothed and furious he might find his way to the American consul, or, horror! to some newspaper office. Then the band would begin to play.

2. If Jones were transferred on board the Duke's yacht and sequestrated the matter at once became criminal, and the prospect of long years of mental distress and dread lest the agile Jones should break free stood before him like a nightmare.

3. It was impossible to make the Duke believe that Jones was Jones and that Rochester was dead.

The only thing to be done was to release Jones, soothe him, bribe him and implore of him to get back to America as quick as possible.

This being clear before the mind of Simms, he at once proceeded to act.

"It is not so much the question of your letting him out," he said, "as of his escaping. And now I must say this. My professional reputation is at stake and I must ask you to come with me to Curzon street and put the whole matter before the family. I wish to have a full consultation."

Duke Agrees

The Duke demurred for a moment. Then he agreed and the two men left the club.

At Curzon street they found the Dowager Countess and Venetia Roebrook about to partake of dinner. Teresa, Countess of Rochester, had already retired, and, though invited to the conference, refused to leave her room.

Then, in the drawing-room with closed doors, Simms, relying on the intelligence of the women as a support, began, for the second time, his tale.

He convinced the women, and by one o'clock in the morning, still unconvinced by his guns after the fashion of the defenders of Bundelcund, the Duke had to confess that he had no more ammunition. Surrendered in fact.

"But what is to be done?" asked the distracted mother of the defunct. "What will this terrible man do if we release him?"

"Do," shouted the Duke. "Do—why the impostor may well ask what will we do to him."

"We can do nothing," said Venetia. "How can we? How can we expose all this before the servants—and the public? It is all entirely Teresa's fault. If she had treated Arthur properly none of this would ever have happened. She laughed and made light of his wickedness, she——"

"Quite so," said Simms, "but, my dear lady, what we have to do now is of now is the man, Jones. We must remember that whilst being an extremely astute person, he must also be recovered for you that large property from the man Mauhausen,

THE unseasonably warm weather ended in a three days' storm.

On the second day a telegram came from Mrs. Higgins saying that her sister was dead. The funeral would be on Sunday.

"We must go down to Hartford to attend it," Honora declared when she had read the sad news to Mildred.

"Why?" Mildred demanded.

"Out of respect for Mrs. Higgins," Honora replied firmly. "There is no use in arguing about it, Milly. We must go."

"All right. That settles it," the other agreed, stretching and yawning. "Ye gods! what weather we are having! And not a thing has happened in two days."

"You mean you have not been to any social affairs," her sister suggested. "You have had lots to do at the office, however."

"Yes, I have," Mildred admitted. "But I was not referring to work. I was thinking about the pleasant things happening."

"You had a call from James Stead last night," Honora reminded her.

"And he bored me to death. Most of the Fairlands men do bore me nowadays—except Tom and Arthur. And they have both stayed away."

"Arthur is fearfully busy at the office," Honora remarked.

Honora Uneasy

Since the love-scene to which she had been an unintentional witness, Honora had not discussed Tom Chandler with her sister. She knew it would only antagonize Mildred. The two girls' ways of looking at things were entirely different. If Mildred loved Tom, all that her sister might say would go for nothing.

If she did not love him, and yet had allowed him to embrace her as she had done, it was useless to argue with her.

Yet Honora was very uneasy. Perhaps, after all, Mildred was in love with Chandler. Perhaps she ashamed of her faith in her sister's delicacy of feeling and innate refinement, Honora almost wished this was so.

On the other hand, when she thought of Chandler's record, her heart sank within her. If Mildred loved Tom, there was only misery ahead for her.

Honora was seized with an illogical desire to talk this matter over with Arthur. Then she sneered at herself as she appreciated the incongruity of such an idea.

Arthur had telephoned several days ago to say that he was unusually busy and could not call at the Brant home this week, as he had hoped to do.

Perhaps, Honora reflected, if Arthur had been here Tom might not have found Mildred such an easy prey to his lovely attentions.

The younger girl had dropped an elaborately casual remark to the effect that she expected Tom Chandler to call on Saturday night. Therefore Honora was not surprised when her sister put on an elaborate semi-evening gown just before dinner, but she forbore to make any mention of it.

Yet, as the evening wore itself away, and Tom did not appear, Honora was sorry for the younger girl. Once Mildred went out into the hall and called up Dr. Chandler's house. Honora heard her ask the servant who answered the telephone if "Mr. Tom Chandler was at home." She also heard her repeat incredulously, "Out of town for the night? Are you sure? Very well. No, there is no message."

When Mildred came back into the library Honora did not look up from her book, but pretended to be so much absorbed in it that she had not noticed her sister's departure or return.

Mildred a Kill-Joy

After some minutes' silence, during which Mildred sat gazing moodily into the open fire, the reader laid down her book.

"Suppose," she suggested, "that we play cards."

"I don't feel like it," Mildred said listlessly. "Hark! Just listen to that rain!"

"It's a regular equinoctial storm, isn't it?" Honora commented. "Do you remember how, when we were kiddies, we used to sit here by the fire with mother on stormy evenings and pretend that the wind was wolves crying outside?"

"Yes," Mildred said. "It must have been rather stupid in those days, just as it is now—only we did not know it."

FLAGS SPECIAL WITH RED HAT—SAVED!

Truth, as they say, is stranger than fiction. It was in this case. The movies haven't anything on the true story a pretty western lassie tells in next Sunday's paper. How she saved her father's special train from disaster by dynamite dashing down the mountainside in her trusty flivver just in time to flag the special with her red hat is one of the breathless features of next Sunday's

BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER AND AMERICAN

Your Dance Frock

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE social season looks brighter this year than it did last, and since the war is over, dances and parties of all kinds are being planned with much enthusiasm. The little war-workers are glad to get out of their uniforms for a few hours and to a frivolous dance frock to enjoy themselves.

Pretty evening gowns are again coming into vogue, and no Winter wardrobe will be complete without at least one dance dress. It need not be new, for some clever dressmaking has been made over from other frocks.

Every girl loves a black evening gown because it is so distinguished. I recently saw an elaborate little black frock that had been made from a black satin afternoon gown. All drapery and other trimming was first removed and the blouse cut off at the bust line.

To attain the fashionably slim silhouette, the satin skirt was made narrower. This satin frock was used as a foundation for the dress. Over this was a tunic which drooped gracefully in points at the sides. Silk tulle embroidered in glittering jet was the material and proved unusually effective.

This tulle may be purchased already embroidered at any good notion shop and varies in price according to the quality and embroidery. Some exquisite designs are offered this season in metal tissue, although most women find the glittering jet more attractive.

To remodel the bodice of the dress, fit it in snugly to the figure, and over it drape some black tulle. Straps of jet over the shoulders are smart, and tiny puff sleeves may be set in. Long tulle sleeves, flared at the wrist and banded with jet are well liked, and the woman with the slender arms will appreciate this covering. A flaring scarlet poinsettia pinned at the bodice lends a striking note to this sombre costume.

No girl need deny herself a pretty dance frock this season, when you consider how simply the newest models are fashioned. The old dress can be combined successfully with new material and a real victory frock will result.

"OH, well, she's through with the West now and why not let her do the suggesting instead of putting her to all the trouble of making excuses not to go."

In such manner did the young man keep the secret about the supposed Myrtle Stone from becoming public property. Little had Helen dreamed as she talked to the brother of her admirer that he knew of her life in the West, that the secret she was waiting to tell Taylor was on the point of being scattered broadcast.

All that his call resulted in was a deeper admiration on the part of the sister and an uneasy feeling on the part of Helen that she could not put off much longer the revelation of the deception she had practiced on her benefactor and his aunt.

Mrs. Collins' telephone message had ended with a request that her nephew come home and take Myrtle and herself to ride, and Taylor had not lost a moment in hurrying to the house.

It was a hot afternoon and the drive along the splendid roads of Manchester gave them all a feeling of exquisite enjoyment.

"I have so much to thank you for," said the girl to Taylor as the big car rolled noiselessly on.

"You mean, I have so much to thank you for," he answered with a decided emphasis on the pronoun of the second person. "Now, without your help just and I both agree that the scenery would not be half so interesting."

That evening, after dinner, Helen was seated in the library with Taylor and Mrs. Collins.

A Propitious Moment

"The drive has made me sleepy, Charles," said his aunt. "And if you two will excuse me I think I'll lie down for a while."

Always courteous, Taylor rose while she left the room, and suddenly Helen resolved to seize this propitious moment to reveal to the man who represented to her all the virtues, the truth about herself.

As he approached she rose, too, and facing him said in a tremulous voice: "Mr. Taylor, I have something to tell you that you must say to you. I have been thinking about it for some time—and I want you to listen to me."

"I am always glad to do that," he answered, "but why here—in this room. Why don't we go out to the veranda—I think that's a more appropriate place for secrets, don't you?"

They walked out to the big verandah enclosed by green vines, and the man stopping took both the girl's hands in his.

"Now," said he, "out with it, let me hear this terrible burden you have been carrying around so long."

"It's this," said Helen, making no effort to withdraw her hands from the firm grasp that held them captive, "that I have been thinking about it for many position here—and I——"

"Hello, there—without," the voice of Judge Blake broke into her words—"have you room for a stray man and his wife?"

For once in his life Charles Taylor was not over-glad to see his old friend. Helen's hands dropped and the owner of the latter hurried to face the quizzical eyes of the Judge.

Changing the Subject

"Hope we're not intruding," said Mrs. Blake.

"I can't imagine you doing that," answered Taylor, while Helen advanced to welcome the unexpected arrivals. "Fact is, Myrtle and I were having a little discussion on botany apropos of these lilies here." He waved airily toward the trellises.

"Mrs. Collins is taking a nap," Helen explained, "it was hot inside, so we wandered out here; you know Mr. Taylor knows everything about everything."

"Does he?" laughed the Judge. "I know some things he's ignorant of, but of course it wouldn't do to tell it to his aunt because you're mercenary," said Taylor, whereupon the Judge took Taylor's arm. "By the way, I've just about finished those papers, if you don't mind talking shop—somehow I'm vastly interested in that mine and I can't tell why."

As they walked up and down the Judge laughed again and he also wondered why he didn't go.

Fortunately for the peace of mind of Taylor the Blakes did not prolong their call and the evening was still young and Mrs. Collins still asleep when they left.

As the man walked back from the steps he picked up the thread of conversation where Helen had dropped it. "You were saying," he remarked, "that there was something on your mind."

"Oh, Mr. Taylor, I must tell you —you can't imagine how I hate to give you a false impression of me——"

"Don't say another word my dear Myrtle. "I have been thinking for some time of just the same thing, and I want to remove the cause of your apprehensions."

The girl paused, astonished—did she know—had some one told him the truth or was it still hidden in her heart. His next few words served only to deepen the mystery.

"The world is a pretty good place Myrtle, but there are some poor specimens in it—I have been wondering how long it would be before some of these specimens would begin to waggle their tongues over your residence here. My dear—may I remove that obstacle, every obstacle from your path—not only now but always? Will you take me as I am? Myrtle, I love you—"

The girl stood as one transfixed —this man, in whom she found the spirit of perfect comradeship, whose goings and comings she counted, was offering her the great joy of going through life by his side as his wife—"

For answer she lifted her face to his and in her eyes as they stood near the great window he saw reflected the light that kindles only when the soul gives answer to its mate.

And as he took her head into his hands and kissed her she thought only of the happiness that was hers, and not at all of the double role she had been playing and her will and with this man who was to be her husband.

A Bitter Reflection

"How Vom would laugh to see us, bless his old heart, to think that I would ever marry his daughter, the little girl I used to dance on my knee—well, this is a queer place, this planet of ours, but we don't care, Myrtle, and now let's find Aunt Sarah and tell her the glad news." He drew the girl into the shadow and folded her to him for moments neither spoke, then she said, "I don't deserve this——"

"You—" he laughed with sheer happiness—"I don't deserve it but I'll try, my dear, to be worthy of you—my beautiful Myrtle." He marched with her into the house, calling loudly, "Aunt Sarah, here's a surprise for you."

His aunt started from the living room couch and almost ran into the library, and there, before her astonished eyes, she blessed Myrtle again in a way that left no doubt of his meaning.

With a woman's intuition Mrs. Collins smiled the smile of one who was really overjoyed, and, walking over to Helen, kissed her with true warmth of feeling and blessed her for making her nephew the happiest of men.

"If you only knew, my dear, how I have longed for this day! Why, Charles never would marry because he never could find the right girl; and all these years—not that he isn't young—he's been waiting for you to come along. I always did believe there was a Providence in this sort of thing, and now I'm sure of it."

"So am I," echoed Taylor.

"I suppose you'll want me to run along and live by myself," she went on with another smile—"yes, I expect so, it never does to mix in the plans of newly-weds."

"If you were a mother I suppose you'd be right," said Taylor. "But I don't think that example applies to aunts—do you, Myrtle?"

For answer the bride-elect kissed the lady who had been so good to her. "I'll make a bargain with you," she said—"when you move I'll move."

JOE CONWAY STRONG BOOSTER FOR ALLIED MEET IN HUB

By NICK FLATLEY.

BRINGING a big international athletic meet to Boston would be a smashing fine thing for the track game throughout New England, according to Captain Joseph Conway, U. S. A., who will be president of the N. E. A. A. U. again so soon as the army lets him out. Captain and President Joseph was more than enthusiastic about the idea when we put it up to him.

"The game used to be good around here, and it ought to come back," he declared. "We have the athletes, the facilities and the best sporting population in the country, or the world for that matter. The game has fallen down, perhaps, because it wasn't plugged hard enough, or perhaps for some other reason.

"As president of the New England branch of the athletic union I intend to be out hustling to make track sports the feature they should be as soon as I'm mustered out. We should get the big meet here, and if the Allied athletes decide to come across, you can rest assured that New England officials will be on the job to hand the best of them all a trot for Boston.

"We are coming to life, as we showed by getting the national convention of all the athletic bodies assigned to Boston for 1919. This is by far the most important athletic meeting of the year, and nothing could be a better forerunner than the best athletic meet."

Captain Conway is just at present stationed at Camp Devens, in the Quartermaster's Department, and so busy with army affairs that athletics have to take a back seat for the time being.

Big Crowd to See Josephs—No Josephs.

BOBBY JOSEPHS drew the ex-second big crowd down at the Commercial Club headquarters, but Bobby didn't show up to entertain the big crowd that he drew, which didn't exactly please the big crowd. It was said Bobby was sick, or something, and for what is always said when a boxer fails to put in an appearance. No doubt he was under the weather, and here's hoping he recovers quickly. But there was nothing to do with the show at all, at all.

A regular four-bout card was run off, and as it contained such Kneeland as the fans saw plenty of the kind of scrapping they most admire. The principal decisions were the three-rounders, the finals, and it happened to be go between Billy Carney of New Bedford, and Young Otto of Chelsea, Carney through ten rough, though not at all scientific, rounds.

Neither of the principals showed enough knowledge to stamp the wise thing against about the ring, in fact, at times the bout resembled a wrestling match more than anything else. Both scrappers made a lot of mistakes, and realized it. They smashed all of world's records for shaking hands, which they did every now and then, after some of the mistakes.

Carney's Left Hand Won Him Decision.

MISTER CARNEY managed to poke his left hand through the wide open Veto guard more often than the law allows in this neck of land on the Carney anatomy, and that's the whole answer to the why and wherefore of his great exponents of the hit-and-run, and the fadaway slide stuff things like that.

In the events leading up to the main affair, Jimmy Brennan flattened Jack Bowen in three rounds, Young Pruto did the same stunt to Charley Mitchell in five, while it only took Tommy Francis some three minutes to knock Frankie Brindisi out of the running.

Three Old Timers Back After More Laurels.

JUST as the heroes of other days used to don the old uniforms down out of the attics when the tocsin of war sounded, so the ancient and venerable gentlemen of the ring—in point of service—are getting back into fighting togs. Two of the latest to come forth for a part in the boxing boom are Al Delmont and George Alger, who were among the best in their respective divisions a flock of years or so ago.

They now have challenges at the world in general, Mister Delmont being game to start up with any of the lantams who are trying to become famous, while Alger defies the welterweights. Georg's has Chick Wat especially in mind, after hearing that Chick is looking for quarrels.

They fought a four or six men and which middle he earned the verdict. We don't know just who did get it, or whether the bout was a draw, but the way they feel now they make them a present good team for one of the allstar shows that are all the rage just now, and good things when all the stars show up.

Wiles and Sutterali in Special Bout.

JOE WILES, New England's famous amateur champion, will box Fred Satterali of Cambridge in a special match on the big bear show of the St. Joseph's Y. M. C. A. in the Commercial Club headquarters on January 22. The Cambridge boxer is a claimant of the Wiles' crown, and has been trying for a long time to get a match at it. He will make them in the regular amateur classes will be on the program.

The officials of the Commercial Club donate their services for the St. Joseph's annual show. The amateurs will also be busy this evening, both the three classed bang on the card at the B. A. A. Everything looks to be over abundant, but most of the classy watch careers will be to the fore.

Parker and Kramer Face Real Opposition

BOBBY Stanley Parker and Tommy Burns, who knocked the big bout at the Central House, may have had plenty of heat and should be at their respective best for the clash, but Mike Rosoff is right he is a tough baby, as he has proved many a time and oft. Parker has yet to know defeat, but will have to fight all the time to keep his record unbroken, when Burns in the other guy in the ring.

Danny Kramer, too, has his work cut out for him, as George Proto is a boxer of considerable talent. He carries a kick as well, and Daniel will not be able to brandish his sleep-producer as nonchalantly as he has against most of his opposition.

Sport Story Contest Booming Horse Yarns Have Call

WHAT'S the funniest horse story you know? You must know one—everybody does. Here's a chance to get some money by telling about it.

The American offers weekly prizes of $10 and $6 for the funniest stories submitted. Different sports for different weeks. The followers of the sport of kings now have their fling.

Make your stories brief—not more than 200 words—write on one side of the paper only, and send them to the Feature Sport Editor, American.

Track and Field Contest winners:

1—LAWRENCE BARRY, 301 East Eagle street, East Boston.

2—JOSEPH GAUTHIER, 114 Regent street, Roxbury.

On, Boy! Turf Colony Speeds It Up in Hurrah Style in Prize Contest

Interest in the horse stories is unusually keen, judging by the huge number of replies reaching the American's sporting department. To use a turf phrase, the "choice selections" seem to fit in with the calibre of the tales being received. Here's just a few of the many received today:

JOSEPH GORMAN, No. 2 Steere av., Providence.

According to the London papers Johnny was to ride a certain horse in a certain race, but for some reason another Jockey was substituted at the last moment.

When the race was over, this horse was among the "also rans."

A stoker, who had given his clients this horse as a sure thing, said after the race: "If Johnny Huff had been on that horse it would have won in a canter, but with that blighter up—Huh! Call 'im a jockey! 'im ride a horse? Why, strike me pink, 'e couldn't ride in a cab."

* * *

ED BOOTH, No. 41 Clifford st., Taunton.

The big race was on; thousands had been bet on Fly Home, a hot favorite. Big Bill Thomas was in the grandstand, his last $1,000 on Fly Home, right on the horse's nose.

They're off. At the quarter, Fly Home third. At the half, Fly Home second. At the stretch, "Come on, you Fly Home," yelled Bill, acting as jockey.

"Sit down," said a little guy next to him. "I've got a dollar on him myself." At the three-quarters Big Home leading by a length. The little guy starts hollering.

Suddenly a little black mare shoots ahead to win by a nose. The little guy looks at the big one and says:

"Fly Home, huh! That ain't Fly Home, it's My Home."

* * *

I. WENDELL GAMMONS, So. Braintree.

It was at the free-for-all meet at the Brockton Fair in 1917.

Two of the speedy ones had each won two heats, and the three-classed being on the card at the B. A. A. Everything had been over abundant, but most of the classy watch careers will be to the fore.

The dope was right, and the pair of two-heaters could be seen at the half going literally neck and neck. It was a great race.

As they approached the quarter stretch the crowd in the grandstand became hushed, some breathlessly awaiting the finish.

A battle of horsemen occupied our attention for a moment. Just as the horses were within ten or twelve feet of the wire, one of them tapped his friend on the shoulder and in a voice of carrying power, muttered: "Do any of you guys know when the next train leaves for Boston?"

FRANCIS MORRIS, No. 106 Queensbury st., City.

I think the funniest saying I ever heard on the race track was at Windsor some five years ago. The grandstand was crowded with women, all posting their "two bits" to make a bet.

It was a selling race and one of the horses was named Dr. Schaefer. As the field flashed under the wire, Dr. Schaefer was about half a furlong behind. One woman, who had bet on him, stood up and screamed:

"Where is Dr. Schaefer?"

The woman next to her calmly replied:

"He's gone to see a patient."

* * *

HAROLD W. WOODFIN, G. M, 3d, No. 10 Highland terrace, Marblehead.

I was on the U. S. S. Lancaster and with a pal when we were in port down in Havana decided to go to the horse races.

When we got to the track the betting was so great we got in on it and put up two American dollars on a horse named Garibaldi.

It happened that the horse won and we collected forty pesos, about eighteen American dollars.

We were well satisfied and decided not to bet any more, but on looking over the list of horses named for the next race, saw a horse named Ice Cream.

A horse with an American name among all those Spanish horses should surely win, we thought, so we put up our money on Ice Cream without getting a look at him.

We found out he was a big rart horse, and when he "melted" coming down the stretch we went back to the ship broke.

B. C. HOCKEY SEVEN IS MAKING DEBUT TODAY

The Boston College hockey team was to play the Commonwealth Pier seven on Bullough's pond, Newton-ville, this afternoon, making its debut for the season. The Maroon and Gold planned starting the game with this line-up: Forwards, Captain Falvey, Corrigan, Hughes and Healy; backs, Morrissey and White or Ryan; goal, Connell.

Manager Ralph Rochette announces that Boston College will play West Point at West Point, January 25, and Annapolis at Williamstown, February 1. The date of the Harvard battle has not yet been agreed upon.

LT. WILSON OUT TO GIVE GOBS GOOD TIME

Results of the determined efforts that have been made to put the Charlestown Navy Yard on the Greater Boston sporting map are already visible.

At the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., in Charlestown, the first of a series of boxing bouts were held before a crowd of over 1,000 gobs from visiting ships.

In the main battle Johnny Reyson of the U. S. S. Delaware, featherweight champion of the Atlantic fleet, had a slam-bang encounter with Frankie Walsh, well-known Lowell boxer, one of the U. S. S. Salem.

Monje, whirlwind Philippine featherweight from the U. S. S. Kentucky, gave a terrific pace for leaguer of the U. S. S. Salem, and won the decision over his heavier opponent.

Peter McVey, of Seattle, Wash., featherweight champion of the Northwest, and a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Delaware, served as referee.

WAS OLD TUFTS HERO.

Lieutenant Wilson, a former Tufts "three-letter" man, is the new athletic director at the Y. M. C. A. He played on the football, basketball and baseball teams when attending the Medford college.

Just out of the service himself, Lieutenant Wilson appreciates the difficulties the athlete in uniform has in finding an outlet for his abilities.

For this reason he is going to make the "Y" a clearing house for Navy Yard athletics. He will accomodate any gob or team of gobs, desiring to arrange boxing, basketball games or bowling matches with his sailors.

BIG ED SWEENEY BACK FROM THE BIG QUARREL

New York, Jan. 11.—Big Ed Sweeney, former Yankee catcher, has returned from France with the 152d Artillery Brigade. Sweeney's assignment was in action before the armistice was signed, but Big Ed came out without a scratch. He plans to return to baseball next season.

MAYBE TRIO WAS JUST HAVING ONE TOGETHER

New York, Jan. 11.—Hal Chase may receive first base for the Giants next season, a "confidential" report that has been attended by Chase, Pat Moran and John McGraw is responsible for the rumor.

PORES AND KYRONEN TO RUN FOR MILLROSE A. A.

New York, Jan. 11.—Charley Pores, crack distance runner, and Villiff Kyronen, another wizard at the game, are going to don the colors of the Millrose A. A., according to talk in athletic circles.

Cross Turns in High String

The Butte A. Airdway Company bowling team won its annual match from the R. B. McKim Company quintet. R. E. Cross turned in the high single string.

Brookline High at Andover

Andover, Jan. 11.—Andover's hockey team had the Brookline High seven for its opponent here this afternoon.

CORBETT'S COLUMN

Pugilism of today owes much to Jem Mace, the great Englishman, who was among the first to introduce scientific methods into the boxing game.

Mace was born in 1831 in Swaffham, England, and became a pugilist more by choice than design.

The little village in which he lived was adjacent to the town of Norwich. On one of his visits there, when he was in his early 20's, Mace encountered a town bully by the name of Stacey. A quarrel ensued and the result was a fight between the two.

Just before the two men were ready to battle Stack insisted upon a side bet of fifty dollars. Mace didn't have the money on his person at the time, but friends loaned it to him and the two men went to it.

MACE BADLY BEATEN.

Bill Thorne, also of Norwich, was a friend of Stack. When he heard Mace had whipped Stack, Thorne decided upon avenging his friend.

So he made remarks about Mace that could be answered in only one way. Mace challenged Thorne to a fight. Thorne accepted, but called for a side bet of $15. Mace put it up and whipped Thorne in jig time in Medway.

Mace was idle for some time after this, but on September 21, 1858, elected to fight against Bob Brettle, a Birmingham giant, for a side bet of $5,000, which sum was contributed partially by Mace, but largely by his friends.

Up to that time Mace had been employing nothing but ring tactics that were common in that day. He used strength—and nothing else. He decided to do the same thing against Brettle —and the finish came quickly for Mace.

In the very first round Mace rushed out and slugged away with his powerful right. In the first few minutes of furious fighting Brettle swung a mighty right harder to the body of Mace and the little fellow crumpled and fell into a heap—a beaten warrior.

NEW METHOD OF BOXING.

Defeat in that contest perhaps was the best thing that could have happened for Mace. He came to know that the one thing necessary to achieve victory over big and powerful men was the employment of speed and scientific methods.

So Mace began to devise ring tricks. For weeks and months he remained in seclusion, doing nothing but feeling out new ideas in pugilism. After he was convinced that he had developed sufficiently he made a match with Posh Price of Birmingham, for a $250 side bet.

Mace went into that contest a boxer, not a fighter. The new ring tricks which he flashed bewildered Price. His dancing in and out made him a phantom. Price powerful, but clumsy, couldn't hit Mace. But Mace hit mercilessly jabbing quickly cut Price to pieces and finally dropped him for the count.

The new style of fighting which Mace exhibited in that contest gave him national prominence in England and Mace and his boxing tricks became famous.

Eddie Shevlin Matched to Battle Britain's Best in London

London, Jan. 11.—Eddie Shevlin, Boston boxer, who is welterweight champion of the United States navy, has been matched to meet John Basham, English titleholder.

They will meet January 28 at the National sporting Club. The size of the purse has not been given out.

Shevlin was a boxing instructor in the American navy from the time of his enlistment when the United States entered the war until assigned to overseas duty.

He was entered in the international service tournament here last month but did not compete.

FOUR SCHOOLS AFTER LEXINGTON FRANCHISE

Lexington High's vacated berth in the Middlesex Valley Interscholastic League will be filled at a special meeting President Charles L. Curtis has called for that purpose. Arlington High, Melrose High, Watertown High and Winchester High embrace the circuit, and four schools are angling for the open franchise.

Bowling at Newton Club

The Newton Club bowling alleys will be the scene of a special three-string handicap match tonight. The prizes. A goose, box of cigars and cap.

Chance for Boxing to Come Back in New York State

Albany, Jan. 11.—Followers of the boxing game are a happy lot following the rumor that Governor Smith is quoted as having said that if the Republican Legislature passed a bill legalizing boxing in the State he would approve it.

It is practically certain that all Democrats and both Houses will vote to re-establish boxing.

There are fifty-five Democrats in the Assembly and twenty-two in the Senate.

With the votes of these members certain in support of the measure, it will be necessary to recruit twenty-one Republicans in the Assembly and four in the Senate to put the bill through and pass it on to Governor Smith for his signature.

GREEN TEAM NOT TO MAKE ANY ROAD TRIPS

Hanover, N. H., Jan. 11.—Dartmouth will not send the varsity basketball and hockey teams away on any road trips this Winter, it is announced by the athletic council. Due to the late start, only interclass games will be played.

The Green plans an unusually busy track season in the Spring. Coach Harry Hillman is expected back at an early date, and the indications are he will have a banner squad to work with. Thomson, the hurdler, and Gordon, the half-miler, are just two of the stars who will be on the team.

STAGE SET FOR CONFERENCE OF MAGNATES

New York, Jan. 11.—The joint meeting of the two major leagues to consider the most important matters affecting baseball will be held here, at the Biltmore Hotel, next Thursday.

This decision was reached at a conference between John A. Heydler, president of the National League, and Jacob C. Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, who represented the American League.

Both the American and National Leagues will hold special meetings at different hotels, on the preceding day. A minor league conference will be held here Tuesday.

While admitting the minor leagues need aid of some kind, President Heydler has stated that he did not believe the present system of drafting players, or developing players on optional agreements, would be changed.

Heydler and Major Branch Rickey, president of the St. Louis Nationals, held a conference and are understood to have discussed the Jack Hendricks case before the meeting was discharged from the army today.

At local headquarters it was announced that the Yankees would train at Jacksonville, Fla., next Spring.

Where the Eagles Are Gathered Together

FOLLOW the crowd. Of course the crowd sometimes does very stupid things, but as a rule it does not do them regularly. Or, as Abraham Lincoln said, "You cannot fool all of the people all of the time."

Put your Want Ad in the Boston Evening American, if for no other reason because other Want Ads like yours are there.

That means that the greatest number of those people who want what you have to offer will see your advertisement.

You will find this gregarious instinct noticeable in any line of trade in the city.

A man wishing to establish an automobile agency will locate his place of business in the neighborhood of other automobile agencies. He will set up in Automobile Row and not on State Street.

There is a clearly marked section of the town where you will find most of the wholesale jewelers, another section quite as clearly marked will contain the piano houses, another the dry goods stores, another the dealers in hats and caps, another the fruit merchants, and so on.

The object of this is plain. Buyers who come to the city want to "look around," and a merchant whose store is outside of the zone containing similar goods to his own is at a disadvantage.

The same rule holds good in advertising.

Put your advertisement where the other advertisements are. The Boston American is the place where the man you want to reach goes to find what you have to offer.

To put your advertisement in a paper containing no others of the kind, thinking that it will attract more attention by appearing alone, is deceptive reasoning.

An old lawyer, giving advice to a young man just out of law school and seeking a place to hang out his shingle, told him to select a place that already had plenty of lawyers, adding with a wink a quotation from the Scriptures, "For where the carcase is there the eagles are gathered together."

The same common sense should guide you in selecting The American as the vehicle for your advertisement. It goes to the greatest number of readers. It carries a large amount of advertising regularly. And it will more certainly reach those persons whom you wish to interest.

Follow the crowd.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN JANUARY 11, 1919. BOSTON.

Where Example Is More Potent Than Precept

One of the disturbing revelations of the draft was the great proportion of young men who should have been at their age in the prime of physical soundness, but who were in one or another particular below par.

It is to be expected that men beyond middle life, who have become habituated to going without exercise, to eating unwisely, and to other indiscretions of maturity, should have sluggish livers or overstrained kidneys or kindred malfunctioning. And the records of life insurance examinations show how fully this expectation is borne out.

In a recent instance one hundred professional men were examined, not one of whom was conscious of an impairment of his bodily functioning; and the experts found that sixty-seven of them had things the matter with them—mostly minor ailments, to be sure, within reach of remedy, but the beginning of senile decline or of dangerous organic diseases.

But these drafted soldiers were the pick of the land, taken at precisely the time when they should have been at their physical best. And far too many of them were not at their best physically.

If we have universal military training, the next generation of young American men will make a much better showing, which is not the least of the reasons why this newspaper so strongly urges universal military training upon the country. Incidentally, it is one of the subjects upon which this newspaper and the late Mr. Roosevelt were in unbroken accord.

Until physical training is universal throughout the United States, it will be well to remember that no small service to meet the need of it has been performed by those men eminent in our national life who have been outdoor men—good riders, good huntsmen, good boxers, exemplars of trained minds in sound bodies.

The boyhood habit of imitation has led many lads to emulate these physical feats of the men about whose careers publicity has thrown a glamour. Where precept fails, example often wins.

What Word MEANS the Most to You?

A Very Old, Always New and Interesting Question

Copyright, 1919, Star Company

Our conversation is made up of words. These words, slowly developed during hundreds of centuries, express the THOUGHT that has also been slowly developed through the centuries.

The animal that we call man began with a few words, perhaps a dozen. One meant danger, another meant prey, another friend, another enemy, others thirst, hunger, affection, hate.

Your ancestor who lived three or four hundred thousand years ago had a language made up of fifteen or twenty words at most. But that "LANGUAGE" made him A MAN.

There are millions of white men living today whose entire language is made up of fewer than five hundred words. There are tens of millions of savages whose entire vocabulary contains fewer than two hundred words.

Shakespeare used more words than any writer has ever used in our language. Yet the words he used are a very small percentage of the entire language as it is now.

Among all the words that you know and use, which has to you THE GREATEST MEANING?

A reader raises the question in this letter:

Editor Boston American:

There are four hundred and fifty thousand words in the dictionary. Of course, each word has a meaning, defining something. I have here five that I believe are the most comprehensive in the English language—Peace, Truth, Love, Charity, Liberty.

A very nice choice of words—peace—truth—love—charity—liberty.

But to the whole language they are about what one note is to the entire keyboard of a piano.

Peace, truth, love, charity, liberty, all express one story in the human brain.

And it is a building many thousands of stories high.

These words are beautiful; the idea that they express is largely ONE idea.

But not one of them, in our opinion, has really a strong meaning.

ETERNITY, we believe, is stronger than any of those words.

And JUSTICE is a stronger word than Eternity itself.

For justice may conquer eternity, but eternity can never conquer justice.

Some words are powerful because of their meaning, and others because of their sound.

POWER—that word itself has a strength that impresses you.

NEVER is another strong and fast word. Men meet this word through life, and it answers their pitiful pleading and their hopes. It is the stone fence that says, "You can't pass here."

FAVORS FORGOTTEN

It was a wise man who said: "Our thanks should be as fervent for mercies received as our petitions for mercies sought."

It might do you some good to think this over.

All the good fortune you have received has been accepted by you as something to which you were entitled; isn't that so?

But have you ever asked yourself why you should have more money and happiness than some other person who has worked quite as hard as you have and made equal efforts to be honest and honorable?

Have you felt thankful enough for what you have escaped in the way of misfortune?

Is it not true that you blame it to hard luck that you have not as much as certain other fellows, and you don't enjoy the same degree of happiness?

Instead, get the fullest amount of joy out of your little, rather than blame the fates for what you have not.

If you would get a little closer to the heart life and inside sacrifice of some of your neighbors you would be more than thankful for what you have been spared.

The Frog Pond

—By Morton Birge—

ASK BOURNE, HE KNOWS

"Fishing with types." The Winsted (Ct.) correspondent of a Springfield newspaper used that expression in a fishing item. News editors fish for circulation with type, but the Winsted writer referred to the regular Izaak Walton game. None in our city room, however, seemed to know whether it meant a new kind of bait, tackle or what. Some said: "Oh, that's another of those Winsted news jokes." One of the editors, alleged to be a very devil of an angler, acknowledged both ignorance and curiosity. The "type" trail was pursued. A hardware store, which features a fishing tackle department, had never heard the term. A man in a sporting goods store allowed that types were used in printing. Thanking this informant ever so much, the seeker put his questionnaire up to Chief Deputy Orrin C. Bourne of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Commission at the State House. "Fishing with types," replied Brd. Bourne; "that is a local term for fishing through the ice with tip-ups, or red flags, which show when there is a fish on the line. You don't hear it around here, but it is a common expression in some fishing neighborhoods."

FINANCIAL CREAM

Richard Pattee of the New England Milk Producers' Association told Sanford (Me.) producers that New England farmers received $3,000,000 extra for milk during the past two years at a cost of about $50,000 for organization.

PATRIOTIC PIGGY

Young Everett Pickens of Wilbraham, also of the Hampden County Pig Club, raised a porker named "Sammy" to 265 pounds. Piggy was killed for market eight days before the armistice. As Everett puts it: "I call him a patriotic pig. He was raised for and died in a patriotic cause, and he bore a patriotic name."

THEY LEAVE WITHOUT NOTICE IN CANADA. HOW ABOUT RUSSIA?

Montreal reports that Leon Trotzky once worked in the Canadian Pacific Railroad yards there, left without notice and still has $14 coming to him. That isn't a circumstance to what may be coming to him before the Russian whirl is over.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Soldiers Grateful

Editor Boston American:

Soldiers are grateful to you for your straightforward editorials about Russia and her internal strife. There is an element in this country which believes in war for the sake of war—but it does not know "squads right" for it takes its ease in swivel chairs. That element has its counterpart in the supporters of Paris and London papers which are advocating a "volunteer" army to conquer Russia for allied trade. After Russia's 180,000,000 people would wipe out a volunteer army, then those same newspapers would advocate a conscripted army to finish the task, and then Russia's internal strife might be imported to our own shores.

We must stand as Americans for America. Let us not give the Bolshevists in this country any good reason for raising hell. From one who was always willing and ready recently to fight for democracy.

ANONYMOUS.

Reliable News

Editor Boston American:

It would clear up a great deal of doubt and misunderstanding if you could see fit to publish the Bolshevikl constitution or a frank discussion of the same.

The honest voter in this country looks upon you as the only reliable source of newspaper information obtainable.

As long as you steer clear of false economy the respectable public will back you.

Complimenting you on past performance, I am,

MR. PROPRIETOR,
OF A Boston theatre.
* * *
MY DEAR Sir,
* * *
THE OTHER night,
* * *
WHEN I was at your theatre,
* * *
RIGHT ALONG side of me,
* * *
THERE WAS a man,
* * *
WHO WAS chewing gum.
* * *
AND RIGHT ahead of me.
* * *
THERE CAME in a lady
* * *
A VERY lovely lady,
* * *
AND HER husband,
* * *
AND BECAUSE I'd met her,
* * *
I BOWED to the lady,
* * *
AND SHE bowed to me,
* * *
AND TOLD her husband who I was,
* * *
AND HE didn't care,
* * *
AND THEY sat down
* * *
AND JUST for a moment,
* * *
IT WAS quiet in the theatre,
* * *
AND THE gentleman with the gum,
* * *
WHO WAS sitting next to me,
* * *
HAD BEEN waiting for that,
* * *
AND WHAT he did to his gum,
* * *
I NEVER can tell you.
* * *
BUT THE crack he made,
* * *
I DON'T see how he could do it,
* * *
WITHOUT THE concussion,
* * *
TEARING AWAY his jaw,
* * *
AND THE lady I knew,
* * *
AND THE other folk in front,
* * *
ALL LOOKED around,
* * *
AND JUST at the moment,
* * *
I WAS chewing a piece of paper,
* * *
OFF THE corner of the program,
* * *
AND THEY thought it was I,
* * *
WHO HAD fired at them,
* * *
AND I couldn't explain,
* * *
AND ALL I could think of,
* * *
WAS TO choke the man with the gum,
* * *
BUT I couldn't do that,
* * *
WITHOUT CREATING confusion,
* * *
AND I just sat there,
* * *
AND WATCHED him,
* * *
HE WAS leaning forward,
* * *
AND I could see him,
* * *
THE WAY he was working,
* * *
TO GET the gum in place,
* * *
FOR ANOTHER crack,
* * *
AND HE got it fixed,
* * *
AND OPENED his mouth,
* * *
JUST A little bit,
* * *
AND CLOSED his eyes,
* * *
AND MOVED his jaws,
* * *
AND IT flevered on him,
* * *
IT DIDN'T crack at all,
* * *
AND WITH that,
* * *
HE GOT another stick,
* * *
OUT OF one of his pockets,
* * *
AND SLIPPED that in,
* * *
WITH WHAT he already had,
* * *
AND TRIED it again,
* * *
AND NEARLY stopped the show,
* * *
IT WENT off so loud,
* * *
AND I'VE been thinking,
* * *
THAT YOU might start something,
* * *
ABOUT HAVING a sharpshooter,
* * *
IN ONE of the boxes,
* * *
TO KILL those gum chewers,
* * *
AND WITH the war over,
* * *
YOU COULD get a sharpshooter cheap,
* * *
BUT THAT guy,
* * *
THAT SAT alongside of me,
* * *
THEY OUGHT to save him,
* * *
AND HAVE a public hanging.

I THANK you.

New England's Remedy for High Meat Prices—Crown Prince Shows Up "Hindy" and "Lady"—Bryan's New Railroad Solution—Marie Corelli Lands Wilson—Inside the Great Krupp Scandal—More on Our 101st—Does Massachusetts Neglect Her State Wards?—Wealth of Pictures

"Back to Beef to Cut Price."

That is the headline prepared for one of the leading articles in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser and American.

The article develops the suggestion, which is coming more and more into favor, that New England farmers ought to get back into the business of raising their own beef.

Time was when beef sold in New England for 5 cents a pound. Now we pay 75 or 80 cents for a pound of choice rump.

While nobody expects to see beef back to the "jitney" price, it is vigorously argued that a revival of New England beef raising would kick a welcome hole in the present schedule of retail meat prices.

Everyone who has teeth enough to negotiate a piece of meat at dinner will be interested in this discussion, which contains some significant facts regarding the "Back to Beef" movement.

Mr. Bryan, our former Secretary of State, presents the second argument in his series on Public Ownership of Public Utilities.

Railroads this time. Mr. Bryan sums up:

"Federal government should own and operate trunk lines and the several States the local network of roads."

It is an able discussion. You may or may not agree with the writer's views, but your attention will be gripped by his broad, forceful presentation.

Alexander Campbell, the clever British journalist, went to the Island of Wieringen, where the German Crown Prince is "in Dutch."

He had a long talk with the C. P. He learned, among other surprising things, that Hindenburg was "a mere nothing" and that Ludendorf never was a great battle general. The Crown Prince said so himself.

The C. P. waxed CONSIDERABLE sarcastic about his father's great flock of generals. It seems that the young man would never have picked this particular time for war anyhow, was dead against it, in fact.

As a high-class "holler," the assertions of the Crown Prince make entertaining reading.

If no man is a hero to his valet, he does not have to be one to his private secretary, either. Witness the case of Krupp von Bohlen, the Prussian nobleman chosen by the Kaiser as the husband of Bertha von Krupp, the heiress to the mighty gun works at Essen, Germany.

Captain Muller, secretary to von Bohlen, tells in one fierce blast how von Bohlen looted the Krupp strong box, robbed and deserted his wife and fled into Holland.

Tomorrow's instalment of the History of the 101st Regiment is the more interesting so far. One arrives with Logan's men at St. Nazaire, "rides" with them for nine days in freight cars to Neufchateau, works with them through the Winter and then—off on a six-day march to war.

Marie Corelli, the famous English novelist, calls President Wilson a greater man than Abraham Lincoln. Read her tribute. It is not long. But it breathes a profound admiration.

Mrs. George T. Rice of Westwood has some bitter things to say about some Bay State institutions. She is chairman of the prison committee of the National Civic Federation. She told what she thought to Florence Wolcott of the Sunday Advertiser and American staff.

She charges that Massachusetts is criminally negligent in the care of her State wards. She mentions Charlestown State Prison and the Woman's Reformatory at Sherborn in her criticisms.

REMEMBER—SERVICE MEN "ADS" FOR BUSINESS POSITIONS ARE PRINTED FREE IN THE SUNDAY ADVERTISER AND AMERICAN.

The murder of Mrs. Carolyn Welt Brown at Rockland, Me., is New England's leading criminal mystery today. Latest news of the hunt for the murderer will be given tomorrow.

The Picture Section will feature:

Mrs. Wilson and Miss Margaret Wilson in Paris with Mme. Poincare, also Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians.

King George and his successful generals.

Yankee soldiers in Germany, China and Russia.

Two pages of our own New England soldiers.

"The American Red Cross Still Serves the World."

That is the title of a full-page article by Henry P. Davison, chairman of the War Council of the Red Cross. He describes the wonderful work of that great organization.

"Surprising Discoveries About Heels."

"Will the Gay Divorcee, Mme. Bruguiere, Now Gain Social Recognition?"

"To Europe by Airship."

"My Three Years of German Slavery," another vivid chapter by the young Countess de Caza-Pascal.

"The New Walking Dresses," by Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile").

Ha-Ha—the Comic Section.
